Represents American Indian and related interests before Congress, federal agencies, and tribal, state and federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court; legal issues as tribes and developers work together to build casinos, power plants, telecommunications projects, and other investment vehicles on American Indian land. Whether the issue is state or federal taxation of tribal businesses, tribal membership qualifications, the role of the Department of Interior in the approval of tribal ordinances, tribal election oversight, land in trust for landed and landless tribes, tribal recognition or Indian gaming, Steptoe delivers well-rounded, culturally relevant, and effective representation and legal advice to its Native American and non-tribal clients. Advocate programs and operational issues, budgetary concerns, or tribal proposals for receipt of federal funds, we provide representation of tribes before all federal agencies with Indian programs and services. They identify key congressional sponsors for tribe-specific legislation and facilitate one-on-one meetings between tribal representatives and key decision makers on relevant matters. Their attorneys also represent clients before federal administration tribunals, such as Indian Board of Appeals, to resolve outstanding tribal claims or disputes. They track and monitor major legislative proposals that could affect Indian policy (with special attention to how the proposal would affect our clients). When proposed legislation is detrimental to their clients' interests, they develop strategies to address it. Steptoe attorneys represent American Indian and related interests before Congress, federal agencies, and tribal, state and federal courts, including the US Supreme Court. Steptoe's team handles significant legal issues that may arise as tribes and developers work together to build casinos, power plants, telecommunications projects, and other investment vehicles on American Indian land. Bound by the interplay of federal, state, and tribal law, reservations offer unique opportunities and challenges for investors. Legal sophistication is critical for companies that wish to collaborate with American Indian tribes on development projects, as well as for tribes interested in working with development partners. Their relationships with tribal and governmental officials give them additional credibility before key decision makers. In addition, they are practiced at drafting and introducing legislation, appearing at hearings, requesting rulemaking or agency action, commenting on proposed agency action, filing litigation, and conducting negotiations. Steptoe arranges legislative meetings in Washington and prepares tribal officials for those discussions.

American Indian Law: For more than four decades, the Strickland Law Firm has provided legal counsel to several Indian tribes and tribal entities, representing them in all aspects of their governmental and business affairs. This challenging and unique area of law requires not only knowledge, but also experience. We have vast experience in all aspects of representing Indian tribal governments and their entities and enterprises. The Firm is very familiar with assisting and representing Indian tribal governments, departments, enterprises, boards, and committees in developing policies and procedures, preparing organizational documents, and addressing various legal matters relating to: Tribal Courts, Water and Natural Resources, Indian Health. In addition, we are also highly experienced in: All aspects of negotiations with federal governmental agencies, including the Department of Interior, Department of Justice, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Bureau of Reclamation, Bureau of Mines, Western Area Power Administration, and National Indian Gaming Commission; negotiating with federal, state, and local governments concerning water issues, including drafting and engineering legislation through Congress; Appearing before U.S. Senate and House Committees to testify on behalf of Indian tribal governments regarding major issues, including proposed legislation and appropriations; Matters relating to post-legislation final settlement contracts and implementation thereof with U.S. Government on behalf of Indian tribal governments; Appearing in federal, state, and tribal courts on behalf of Indian tribes, tribal entities, and tribal enterprises. Businesses Seeking to do Business with Tribes and Tribal Enterprises: The Strickland Law Firm also provides legal counsel and guidance to business entities in negotiating business agreements and arrangements with Indian tribes, tribal entities, and tribal enterprises. Because of the many legal nuances and peculiar laws applicable to business relationships with Indian tribes, it is essential for such businesses to have legal counsel who is seasoned in these matters in order to avoid the pitfalls – some of which can be devastating – of not addressing critical issues. Experience in recognizing and understanding tribal sovereignty, tribal sovereign immunity and limiting it in a fair manner, and the delegation of authority to bind the tribal party to the transaction is paramount to achieving this goal. This experience along with our privilege of having worked with many tribal authoritative bodies and leaders are what we bring to the table when representing business entities doing business with tribes.

Walter Viar, Principal/Attorney

Mr. Viar used the experience he gained at that firm and applied it to his current practice where he works as a sole practitioner focusing on the various legal issues facing Indian tribes and their members. Some of the matters he's recently handled include historical and archival research, sovereignty issues, CEQA/AB52, conservatorships, and state taxation as it applies to tribes and tribal land. In addition, Mr. Viar has worked with and built relationships with lobbyists and state representatives in both the California State Senate and Assembly. As a descendant of the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians, Mr. Viar grew up understanding the ongoing issues faced by Native Americans throughout the state and has been fortunate to maintain a close relationship with his tribe. It is Mr. Viar's goal to support the rich culture and legacy of Native American tribes. He strives to provide quality and affordable legal services for tribes who face the inevitable challenges that arise for Native Americans throughout California.

COLUMBIA STRATEGIC CONSULTING GROUP TRIBAL AND FIRST NATION RELATIONS

Quanah Spencer (Yakama), Partner/Vice President
North America's native peoples are far more diverse and sophisticated in their governance than many realize. Working with tribes, pueblos, and first nations, we have knowledge, experience, and discernment that are crucial to build trusted relationships. That is the first, essential step toward dialogue, problem-solving, and mutually beneficial agreements. Among the ways we can assist include the following: Comprehensive tribal relations, tribal government affairs services; Communication and engagement protocols; Support with permitting on or in proximity to reservation, reserve, or historic/ceded lands; Railroad, utility, and other rights-of-way issues on reservation and reserve lands; Facilitation of tribal, corporate, and/or government dialogue

In 1992, after changes to federal gambling laws, the Winnebago Tribe opened a casino on tribal land near the town of Sloan, Iowa. The casino was an immediate success. But in 1994 Iowa expanded gaming in the Tribe's primary markets. The Tribe realized that gaming revenues would not be a long-term solution to the Tribe's overall goal of prosperity. Ho-Chunk, Inc. was formed in 1994 with one employee to diversify the Tribe's investments away from gaming. It has grown to more than 1,000 employees. The goal was to develop an entrepreneurial company that was able to recognize and develop various economic opportunities.

TWO KINGS CASINO RESORT

Owned and operated by the Catawba Indian Nation of Rock Hill, SC. The Nation reached an agreement with state leaders for a Class III gaming compact, which allows high-stakes table games and slot machines at the project. The agreement, which was approved by North Carolina Gov. Roy Cooper, will now go to the U.S. Department of the Interior for final approval. Securing the compact is critical for the Catawbans because, without it, the tribe could only have Class I and Class II gaming at the casino. Class II gaming includes bingo and non-banked card games, according to the American Gaming Association. The Catawbans are only the second group in N.C. to receive a compact for Class III gaming, the other being the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, which owns two casinos in western N.C. In addition to the ability to conduct traditional, casino-style gambling, the compact also included a revenue-sharing agreement between the Catawbans and the state. The agreement is similar to the Cherokee compact. The state will receive a percentage of the tribe's live table gaming revenue, which Harris said is expected to reach $5 million to $10 million per year. The tribe will also place $1 million into a fund to support federal and state-recognized tribes and assist local communities with economic development projects. In March, the U.S. Department of the Interior released its decision to put the 16.8-acre casino site, which is just off Dixon School Road and Interstate 85, into a trust for the Catawbans. The Catawbans broke ground on the $273 million resort project in July. However, the project has received staunch opposition from several angles. Interior's decision has been opposed in federal court by the Cherokees, whose case is pending but was recently expedited by a federal judge in Washington D.C. A hearing is now expected sometime in February, court documents say. On Sept. 24, the U.S. House Subcommittee for Indigenous Peoples of the United States held a hearing regarding H.R. 8255, or the Catawba Indian Nation Lands Act. The bill would reaffirm the Department of the Interior's decision in the face of sharp criticism of the project. The development surrounding the casino is also beginning to take shape. Casino developer Wallace Cheves is planning a massive, three-phase residential development at a 118-acre site near the casino. The project, called Catawba Village, is the first known project for the hundreds of acres surrounding the casino site that have been purchased in recent months.

In Canada, the term Indigenous peoples (or Aboriginal peoples) refers to First Nations, Métis and Inuit peoples. These are the original inhabitants of the land that is now Canada. In the 2016 census by Statistics Canada, over 1.6 million people in Canada identified as Indigenous, making up 4.9 per cent of the national population. Though severely threatened — and in certain cases extinguished — by colonial forces, Indigenous culture, language and social systems have shaped the development of Canada and continue to grow and thrive despite extreme adversity.

A listing of Canadian Nations and Bands, with land areas of at least 1,000 acres. Many bands have more than one reserve in each province. Arranged by Reserve & Province.

Fishing Lake Metis Settlement (in Cree, Packechawanis) is one of the original twelve colonies of the Metis people in Alberta, and one of the eight that now remain. As an independent, self-governing community our connections to each other and the outside world are incredibly important. Independence and self-governance are an important part of the Metis way of life since first emerging as a distinct ethnic group.

The land base at Kikino Metis Settlement, a Metis community of over 1100 resident members, covers nearly 44,000 square hectares. The Settlement is situated in northeastern Alberta where it shares a boundary with Buffalo Lake Metis Settlement. While the local economy at Kikino is diverse, as with the other seven Settlements, it is grounded in the land and the ability to live off the land and its resources. Kikino has benefited from successful oil and gas exploration and development, as well as forestry resources. Today, the local economy emphasizes construction, ranching, aggregate sales, oilfield activities and tourism.

Our traditional territory once occupied much of what is now Hope and surrounding areas. Our natural resources in the territory have sustained our people and way of life for centuries. We thrive on a communal lifestyle that respects the wisdom of our elders. Chawathil are Sto:lo people or "river people" who depend upon the river and land for their survival and livelihood. The Sto:lo share a common language known as Halq'emeylem (Hal-ko-me-lem), of the Coast Salish language family. The people moved throughout the territory using the resources and land provided for fishing, hunting and gathering, to maintain their livelihood

 Dr. J. Richard G. Herbert, Chief Executive Officer

Dr. Herbet has worked with First Nations in Canada for over fourteen years. I learned a great deal while helping communities and individuals. I worked in whatever capacity was needed to get the job done. As a result, I have been involved in many aspects of community life and needs. High priority First Nation community needs are related to service delivery gaps. These gaps were created by the exclusion of First Nation rights and culture from Canada's developing infrastructure. Canada has set the goal of closing the gap and reconciling with its First Peoples. To do that, Canada must redefine, and rebuild if necessary, infrastructure so that it serves First Nations as well as other Canadians. Unfortunately, governments in Canada continue to withhold inherent First Nation rights while dictating what rights First Nations will have. The conflict created by this rights discourse has surfaced as an impasse in resource development and reinforced the need for the inclusion of Inherent First Nation rights and sovereignty into Canada's authority and decision-making structures.

The NCCAHA is one of six centres in the National Collaborating Centres for Public Health program, each focusing on a different aspect of public health. Together, the centres help improve response to chronic disease and injury, infectious diseases, environmental health and health disparities. The NCCAHA is making significant strides in support of a renewed public health system that is inclusive and respectful of diverse First Nations, Inuit, and Métis peoples. Our collaborations in knowledge sharing extend beyond traditional boundaries – institutional, jurisdictional, geographical and professional – to address the multi-faceted and structural issues underpinning Indigenous health. We continue to strengthen the links between evidence, knowledge, practice and policy in support of the public health goals of First Nations, Inuit and Métis peoples. Established in 2005 by the Government of Canada.

The Okanagan Nation Alliance (ONA) was formed in 1981 as the inaugural First Nations government in the Okanagan which represents the 8 member communities including; Okanagan Indian Band, Upper Nicola Band, Westbank First Nation, Penticton Indian Band, Osoyoos Indian Band and Lower and Upper Similkameen Indian Bands and the Colville Confederated Tribes on areas of common concern. Each community is represented through the Chiefs Executive Council (CEC) by their Chief or Chairman. The Okanagan Nation territory includes an area that extends over approximately 69,000 kilometers. The northern area of this territory scratches the area of mica Creek, just north of modern-day Revelstoke, BC, the eastern boundary between Kaslo and Kootenay Lakes. The southern boundary extends to the vicinity of Wilbur, Washington and the western border extends into the Nicola Valley.

The First Nations University of Canada's holistic approach to post-secondary education begins with the Elders, whose presence, wisdom, and counsel are the mainstay not only for students but also for the University as a whole. Their knowledge of First Nations' tradition, culture, and spirituality creates a unique support service. This tradition helps restore an individual's self-confidence and peace of mind, which in turn helps the learning process. The Elders reinforce our respect for, and understanding of, the Creator's role in our lives. Each of the university's three campuses benefit from Elders from nearby communities. Each contribute to First Nations' holistic and cultural approach to learning at First Nations University of Canada throughout the academic year. Our Elders Offices: Northern Campus (Prince Albert) 306-765-3333 Ext 7139; Saskatoon Campus 306-931-1800 x 5475; Regina Campus (Main) 306-790-5950 x 3129

 Michael Pfuenger, Senior Counsel

Lee is a lawyer of First Nations ancestry (Taku River Tlingit – Northwest British Columbia) who works primarily with First Nations towards the reconciliation of Aboriginal and Treaty rights, and often presents and consults on topics about which he is passionate, such as Reconciliation and Indigenous law and governance. Lee has spent over twenty years providing general legal counsel to First Nation governments, businesses and organizations, as well as businesses that work with First Nations. Lee has worked with clients in conjunction with the Assembly of First Nations and Canada on the development of the Specific Claims Tribunal – particularly in relation to Specific Claims over $150 million. He is currently working with clients on the resolution of outstanding claims well in excess of $2 billion. He assists First Nations communities in the development, implementation, and amendment of Trusts, always with a focus on creating the best possible opportunities for his clients and the benefit of future generations. Lee is honoured to be the Resident Fellow in Indigenous Law & Culture of the University of Calgary Faculty of Law, as well as an Adjunct Professor of Indigenous Law. He serves on the boards of directors of Ecotrust Canada and The National Consortium for Indigenous Economic Development (NCIED).
