(tribal elder, activist, genealogist & historian)

Education: University of North Dakota, BA (History). Affiliation & Address: Tribal elder, genealogist & historian, Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, Fort Yates, ND. In April 2016, LaDonna founded the Sacred Stone Camp, as a center for cultural preservation and spiritual resistance to the Dakota Access pipeline. Protests by thousands at the pipeline site in North Dakota near the Standing Rock Reservation grew to be the largest gathering of indigenous nations in modern history. Sacred Stone Camp has evolved into Sacred Stone Village—a shared vision of a permanent, multi-generational, diverse eco-village community to teach by example how to live and thrive in an ecologically and spiritually sustainable community. Goals include sharing traditional indigenous lifestyles and wisdom, teaching the true history of the native people of Turtle Island, and practicing food sovereignty, technological self-reliance through “green” energy, and sustainable architecture and village planning in harmony with Native traditions. Allard and other Indigenous leaders focused on media outreach, resulting in tribal delegations and individuals coming to stand with them from all over the country and, eventually, the world.<sup>[57]</sup> As the numbers grew beyond what Allard's land could support, an overflow camp was also established nearby, which came to be known as the Ochéthi Šakówiŋ camp (the Lakhotiyapi name for the Great Sioux Nation or Seven Fires Council).<sup>[58]</sup> In September, Allard said that 26 of the 380 archaeological sites that face desecration along the entire pipeline route were held sacred to the Sioux Nations, the Arikara, the Mandan, and the Northern Cheyenne, comparing it to genocide.<sup>[55]</sup> Since the founding of the camp and the expansion of the NoDAPL movement, she has won numerous awards and was a highly sought-after international speaker.

ALVORD, LORI (Navajo-Dine') 1958-
(physician-surgeon)

Born in Crownpoint, N.M. in 1958. Education: Dartmouth College, BA; Stanford University School of Medicine, MD. First Dine' woman to be board certified in surgery. Dr. Alvord uses new techniques that bring together Navajo healing techniques and modern Western Medicine. After studying medicine at Stanford University, Dr. Alvord returned to her Navajo reservation in New Mexico only to learn that, despite the importance of her technical proficiency in surgery, simply "fixing" the physical problem was not sufficient to fully cure a patient. Addressing the psychological and spiritual aspects of healing was important as well. This led to a more holistic approach to medicine that took into account the patient's environment and relationships, and also incorporated artwork and nature into the hospital's design. Past professional posts: From 1991-1997, Dr. Alvord practiced as a surgeon with the Indian Health Service, at one of its facilities in Gallup. Alvord was also the associate dean for student affairs at Dartmouth Medical School as well as assistant professor of surgery and psychiatry at Dartmouth from 1997-2009. From 2003 onwards, Dr. Alvord served as an Associate Faculty member for the Center for American Indian Health at Johns Hopkins School of Public Health. From 2008-2010, Dr. Alvord served on the National Advisory Council for Complementary and Alternative Medicine (NACCAM), the principal advisory body to the National Center for Complementary and Alternative Medicine (NCCAM), a component of the National Institutes of Health. From 2010-2012, Dr. Alvord served as the Associate Dean of the Central Michigan University College of Medicine, which opened during the Fall 2013 semester. She played an instrumental role in developing the new medical school. She was also the associate dean of student affairs and admissions at the University of Arizona College of Medicine, in Tucson, Arizona from 2012-2014. Awards, honors: In 2001, Dr. Alvord received an honorary degree from Albany Medical College. In 2006, Dr. Alvord received an honorary degree from Drexel University. In 2009, Dr. Alvord was bequeathed an honorary degree from Pine Manor College. In 1992, Dr. Alvord was the recipient of Governor's Award for Outstanding New Mexico Women, from former governor of New Mexico, Bruce King. In 1999, Dr. Alvord was the recipient of the American Medical Writers Association the 2000 Will Solimene Award of Excellence, for the publication "Warp and Weft", an excerpt from The Scalpel and the Silver Bear.<sup>[6]</sup> In 2000, Dr. Alvord was the recipient of Circles Book Award from Georgia College and State University for her autobiography, The Scalpel and the Silver Bear. In 2003, Dr. Alvord was the recipient of Veterans Affairs Federal Appreciation Award, The White River Junction Veterans Affairs Medical Center; 2013 nominee for U.S. Surgeon General. Published work: Her autobiography, The Scalpel and the Silver Bear, has brought increased attention to her career as a surgeon.

Laurie will be on sabbatical during the 2019-20 academic year. During her sabbatical, she has fellowship support from the ACLS and the Beinecke Library at Yale University and will be researching and writing her new book project, Native American Cultural Activism as Historical Text: From Sarah Winnemucca to Twenty-First Century Drama. Native American Cultural Activism connects three nineteenth and twentieth century women authors with twenty-first century playwrights, to illustrate cultural activism as a continuous process. This approach reframes activism as ongoing rather than interpreting it simply as an event. I consider how women raised with ancestral traditions working from and for their communities achieved tangible benefits through their public-facing activism. I link their efforts to contemporary Native dramatists and their work in repurposing the history play to recount Native American stories that general audiences have either forgotten or never learned. This project takes seriously the community stories authors, activists, and playwrights use to frame histories and cultural significance on their own terms.

ATCITTY, SHENAN R. (Navajo-Dine')
(attorney; board president)

Education: University of New Mexico, BA, 1988; University of New Mexico School of Law, JD, 1993. Address & Affiliation: Partner, Sr. Counsel, Holland & Knight, LLP, 2099 Pennsylvania Ave., NW, Suite 100, Washington, DC 20006 (202) 457-7128; Shenan focuses on representing Indian tribal governments before Congress and Federal Agencies. Other professional post: President, Board of Directors, American Indian Graduate Center, Albuquerque, NM. Past professional posts: Ms. Atcity began her legal career clerking and later serving as a contract attorney for the U.S. attorney's office, District of New Mexico in Albuquerque, N.M. where she focused on Indian water rights adjudications and settlements, as well as protection of Indian lands in the Southwest. Following her work with the U.S. attorney's office, she joined a small firm in Albuquerque which handled all of the Navajo Nation's complex litigation. While working there, she second-chaired the successful litigation and settlement of a class action lawsuit filed on behalf of all Navajo allottees against the federal government for beneficial title to the minerals underlying their allotments. When the federal government broke apart the eastern portion of the Navajo Reservation in the early 1900's under the allotment policy, the Department of the Interior wrongfully reserved the minerals under the authority of general public lands laws, which had no legal application to Indian trust lands. Sixty years later, the class action (Mescal litigation) was filed on behalf of the severely impoverished allottees who had experienced years of federal neglect and abuse of their land rights, while watching burgeoning energy development on their lands without any financial return or benefit to them. After more than 13 years in federal court and a year of settlement negotiations, Ms. Atcity and lead attorney Paul Frye, successfully settled the case, resulting in the allottees sharing in the revenue stream of existing leases and providing a mechanism for the federal government to provide the allottees title to the minerals that had been wrongfully reserved. Also on behalf of the Navajo Nation, Ms. Atcity conducted the trial work in the longstanding Navajo Nation v. United States breach of trust case involving the Department of the Interior's wrongful collusion with Peabody Coal Company to undervalue the coal leases on the Navajo Nation. Her work provided the foundation for the successful reconsideration by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit in ruling the federal government liable for money damages to the Navajo Nation for breach of trust in colluding with the energy company.

ATKINSON, KAREN J. (Three Affiliated Tribes of North Dakota)
(attorney; company president)

Education: Stanford University, BA (Public Policy), 1982; The University of New Mexico School of Law, JD, 1987. Affiliation & Address: President, Tribal Strategies, Inc., Washington, DC (2017-present); Past professional posts: Deputy Director, U.S. Department of Energy, Washington, DC, 2014-17; Director, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, DC, 2011-14; Executive Director, Native American Contractors Association, Washington, DC, 2005-09; Partner, Dorsey & Whitney LLP, Washington, DC, 2003; Senior Counselor, U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, Washington, DC, 2001-03; Deputy Director, National Park Service, Washington, DC, 2000-01; Senior Counselor to the Assistant Secretary for Fish, Wildlife & Parks, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, DC, 1997-2000. Karen developed programs and strategies to cultivate entrepreneurship, grow energy-sector businesses, and develop talent for the energy workforce. Karen represented the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) at outreach forums, roundtables, trade associations, and other government agencies to advance Departmental programs. Karen identified, tracked, monitored and analyzed the impact of a high volume of congressional acquisition reform bills in a fast-paced legislative environment. Karen was recruited as a Partner in the Indian practice group in the Washington, DC office to represent tribal governments and private sector entities doing business with Indian tribes. As a Partner, Karen provided strategic advice on public land management issues to Indian tribes on Department of Interior natural resource management issues. Karen also conducted research and analysis on opportunities and financial incentives for telecommunication businesses. She provided advice to clients on the potential for renewable energy development on tribal lands and how to do business with Indian tribes. Karen was recruited to provide legal and policy advice to the Assistant Secretary on complex, controversial, and precedent-setting policy and program issues related to the National Park Service and Fish and Wildlife Service. Karen managed multiple projects and programs that required extensive knowledge of environmental planning, programs, and requirements related to National Park Service and Fish & Wildlife Service. As Senior Counselor, Karen represented the U.S. Government in a number of complex negotiations including the establishment of the Timbisha Shoshone Homeland within Death Valley National Park, the development of a Colorado River management plan, and the negotiation of a $50 million dollar conservation agreement with a Northwest tribe to resolve an Endangered Species Act dispute. OSA was formed by three individuals, all of whom are enrolled members of Native Nations. They were born and raised on reservations and continue to maintain residences in their home communities. Moreover, all three still hold on to their people's customs, traditions, culture, and beliefs. The similarities in their upbringing and identity brought them together to pursue a common vision: to put the future of Native Nations back in the hands of Native people. Accordingly, they established OSA as a company that would serve Native Nations and indigenous peoples, in the United States and around the world. Together, they are known as Team OSA. Mr. Austin practiced, and continues to practice, law as a solo practitioner. He also served as a prosecutor for the Pascua Yaqui Tribe. He is licensed to practice in state and tribal court; his areas of practice are in federal Indian law and tribal law. Mr. Austin specializes in nation building, customary law, business, economic development, and international trade. He is currently pursuing a Doctor of Juridical Science (S.J.D.) in the field of law and continuing the work he did in the Master of Laws program—the engagement of international trade among Native Nations. Mr. Austin's passion for helping Native Nations achieve self-determination and uprooting the systematic abuses perpetuated by federal Indian law has earned him the moniker, the Wolf of Indian Country.

BATES, T. ERIC
(instructor of anthropology)

Education: Northern Kentucky University, BA, BS, MA; Union Institute & University, PhD. Affiliation & Address: Instructor, Dept. of Anthropology, 216 Landrum, Highland Heights, KY 41099 (859) 572-6112. E-mail: batesth@nku.edu. Research and Teaching Interests: Cultural anthropology; North American Indians (especially Blackfoot); contemporary Native Americans and Christianity; religion and critical contextualization; ethnicity; Appalachia; cultural and social geography; communication and speech. Current Research: My doctoral research focused on the intersections of Pentecostalism and Native Identity formation on the Blackfeet Indian reservation in Browning, Montana. After years of gathering ethnographic data on the reservation, it is my position that Blackfeet Pentecostals continue to maintain their Native identity. Using theories of ethnic boundaries, I contend that Blackfeet Pentecostals employ cultural signals in order to maintain boundaries around which their Indian identity is produced. Published works: Native American Identity, Christianity, and Critical Contextualization (Cherohala Press, 2013).

BATTON, GARY (Choctaw of Oklahoma) 1966-
(tribal chief)

Education: Southeastern Oklahoma State University, BS (Business management), 1989, Affiliation & Address: Chief (2014-present), Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, P.O. Drawer 1210, Durant, OK 74702 (580) 924-8280. Past professional posts: Gary began his career with the Choctaw Nation in 1987 as a clerk in the Purchasing Department while he was attending Southeastern Oklahoma State University. Upon graduating with a Bachelor's Degree in Business Management in 1989, he accepted the position of Deputy Director at the Choctaw Nation Housing Authority. While at Housing, he was responsible for the management of Housing Authority operations and established several programs including the Choctaw Nation Drug Elimination Program, Family Investment Center Program and the Choctaw Nation Boys and Girls Club. In 1997, he was appointed to the position of Executive Director of Health. His first undertaking after stepping into the role was replacing the Choctaw Nation Hospital, a former Tuberculosis Center constructed in the 1930s, with the state-of-the-art Choctaw Nation Health Care Center, the first tribally funded health facility in the United States. He continued to expand and improve the Choctaw health system by adding clinics in Idabel, Stigler and Atoka and replacing or expanding outdated, inadequate clinics in Hugo, Broken Bow and McAlester. He constructed a new facility for adult inpatient alcohol and drug treatment and a hospitality house for patients traveling long distances for appointments at the health care center in Tallihina. Concerned by the fact that some tribal businesses were not profitable and impressed with the growth and improvements to the health system, Chief Pyle appointed Gary to the position of Assistant Chief in May 2007. Gary immediately took action to grow the businesses & improve the profitability for the benefit of Choctaw members. As the Assistant Chief, Gary's focus changed from improving the health system for tribal members to growing and improving the entire Choctaw Nation for the benefit of tribal members. Among his numerous duties, he served as Chairman of the Choctaw Nation Business Committee where his first initiative was the development of an economic plan that would boost the economy in the 10½ counties and create more than 700 jobs for the area. Under his guidance, the profitability for all tribal businesses improved with an overall increase of 69%.

(attorney)

Education: Trinity College, BA (History), 1976; University of Pennsylvania Law School, JD, 1979. Affiliation & Address: Co-chair & Partner, Native American Law & Policy Group, Perkins Coie, 700 Thirteenth St., NW, Washington, DC 20005 (202) 654-6234. E-mail: dbaur@perkinscoie.com Throughout his 30-year legal career, Don has engaged in a broad-based environmental and natural resources practice. He has been involved in the full range of legal issues arising under the laws dealing with Native Americans, ranging from Alaska Native Corporations and subsistence rights, to Native Hawaiian land disputes, to Indian gaming, trust land, tribal acknowledgment, natural resource and energy development, wildlife conservation business transactions, and cultural resource protection matters, from Alaska to California to Florida to New England. He is co-chair of the Perkins Coie Native American Law group, which is nationally-ranked by Chambers. One of the principal elements of Don's Native American law practice has been the successful negotiation of precedent-setting agreements between local governments and Indian gaming tribes such as the Seminole, Mashpee Wampanoag, Menominee, Mohegan, Narragansett, and Shakopee Mdewakanton Sioux Tribes and their local government neighbors. His work with the Town of Montville and Mohegan Tribe led to the federal Mohegan Nation of Connecticut Land Claims Settlement Act of 1994. He also has represented energy, timber, real estate, water utility, irrigation districts and mining entities in transactional work for access to tribal lands and use of tribal resources, including business activities on Indian reservations throughout the country. Don has worked directly for Tribes and Alaska Native corporations and entities on numerous matters, including Endangered Species Act compliance and Indian religious practices. He works with Tribes and parties dealing with Tribes to ensure full consultation on federal actions affecting historic, cultural, and religious properties and artifacts. In addition to environmental compliance and natural resource use and development, Don practices in all areas of federal Indian law, including gaming, trust land acquisition, tribal acknowledgment, and business transactions. Other professional posts: Vermont Law School, Adjunct Professor, Environmental Law Center, 1998 – present; Environmental Law Institute, Instructor, Environmental Law Boot Camp, 2002 – present.
