Introduction

According to figures released by the 2015 U.S. Census, there are approximately three million American Indians & Alaska Natives and two million mixed-race Native Americans in the United States. The ten states with the largest American Indian & Alaska Native alone or in-combination population in 2015 were California (800,000), Oklahoma (550,000), Arizona (370,000), Texas (300,000), New York (250,000), New Mexico (220,000), Washington (170,000), North Carolina (150,000), Florida (100,000), and Michigan (75,000). Alaska has approximately 100,000 Eskimos and Aleuts. The largest number of people who identified with an American Indian tribal grouping, either alone or in combination, identified as Cherokee (819,000). The Navajo tribal grouping had the largest number of individuals who identified with one tribal grouping and no other race (287,000). Among the largest American Indian tribal groupings, Blackfeet had the highest proportion that reported more than one tribal grouping or race. Almost 75% of Blackfeet individuals reported an additional race and/or tribal grouping. The largest Native tribal grouping, either alone or in combination, was Yup'ik (34,000), followed by Inupiat (33,000). Yup'ik also had the greatest number of people who identified with one tribal grouping and no other race (29,000). Among all Alaska Native tribal groupings, Tlingit-Haida had the highest proportion who reported more than one tribal grouping or race. 42% of Tlingit-Haida individuals reported an additional race and/or tribal grouping.

Population figures have been increasing at a rate of more than 50% per decade since 1960. There is no one Federal or tribal definition that establishes a person's identity as Native American. Government Agencies use different criteria for determining who is a Native American. Similarly, tribal groups have varying requirements for determining tribal membership.

There are more than 300 Federal Indian reservations and 574 federally recognized tribes in the United States including about 200 Alaska Native village groups. An Indian reservation is an area of land reserved for Indian use. The name comes from the early days of Indian-white relations when Indian tribes relinquished land through treaties, reserving a portion for their own use. Congressional acts, Executive orders, and agreements have also created reservations. Many reservations today, however, have some non-Indian residents and non-Indian landowners. Tribe among the North American Indians originally meant a body of persons bound together by blood ties who were socially, politically, and religiously organized, and who lived together, occupying a definite territory and speaking a common language or dialect. With the relegation of Indians to reservations, the word tribe developed a number of different meanings. Today, it can be a distinct group within an Indian village or community, a large number of communities, several different groups or villages speaking different languages but sharing a common government, or a widely scattered number of villages with a common language but no common government. According to a 2015 estimate by the DOI's Office of Indian Affairs, approximately 1.8 million Native Americans living on or adjacent to reservations. The remaining 3.2 million Native Americans and Alaska Natives reside in cities and suburbs across the country.

A special U.S. Senate committee charged with investigating fraud and mismanagement in the Office of Indian Affairs has recommended adoption of what it calls "A New Federalism," in which the federal government would abolish the BIA and transfer annual federal appropriations directly to tribal governments. The committee said new agreements are needed between the federal governments and the tribes "that both allow American Indians to run their own affairs and pledge permanent federal support for tribal governments." These new agreements would not affect any existing treaty rights or alter the legal status of tribal governments. An Office of Federal-Tribal Relations (OFTR) would be created within the executive office of the President. The OFTR would be responsible for negotiating and overseeing implementation of formal agreements with federally recognized Indian tribes. "The agreements will allow any tribe that so chooses to exit the current bureaucracy of federal Indian programs and to receive and use at its own discretion a proportional share of the federal Indian budget." The committee proposes that funding be allocated to tribal governments based solely on population figures. The special committee also recommended that each House of Congress create a permanent full committee on Indian affairs, with additional staff specifically assigned to perform oversight and investigations.

The U.S., upon ratification of an agreement by both a tribe and the federal government, would provide the tribe with an annual Tribal Self-Governance Grant (TSGG), equaling its fair share of the current federal Indian budget. The size of the grant would be proportional to the population base of the tribe. Each grant would be supplemented by an annual cost-of-living allowance. Equally important, there would be a transfer from the Department of the Interior's Office of Indian Affairs and Indian Health Service and any other federal agency with Indian-related programs to the contracting tribes, such assets as necessary for the tribe to carry out their new responsibilities under the agreement.

This 26th Edition of Reference Encyclopedia of the American Indian is divided into four main sections. The first section contains source listings. Each listing gives address, phone number, contact and, in most cases, a brief description of activities and pertinent information. Listings are arranged either alphabetically or alpha-geographically. At the beginning of each section there is an explanatory note detailing the type of sources listed and the manner in which they are arranged. The length of each listing reflects the amount of material received from each source. Material has been researched directly from questionnaires or has been gathered from other reliable sources. For further information on any listed source, it is suggested that the reader write to the address or call the number given in the listing. The second section is solely Canadian listings; the third section of the book is a bibliography of approximately 11,000 in-print books. Listed alphabetically, each book gives basic bibliographic information. The alphabetical section is broken down into a subject categories section with corresponding titles listed for each category. A publishers index is provided at the end giving the publishers' addresses and phone numbers. The fourth section contains approximately 3,000 listings of which there are more than 1,500 biographical sketches of prominent Native Americans involved in Indian Affairs, education, healthcare, business, the arts and professions, as well as non-Indians active in Indian affairs, history, art, anthropology, archaeology, etc., and the many fields to which the subject of the American Indian is related.

All changes and additions to the listings in this book should be directed to me at the address given at the bottom of the title page.

REFERENCE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE AMERICAN INDIAN

There are 574 federally recognized American Indian tribal nations and communities. These groups are entitled to U.S. legal protections of tribal self-government and rights to tribally owned land. Included are about 200 Alaskan Native groups. Also listed are 200 state-recognized and non-recognized Indian communities that have not signed treaties, or that have not had regular legal relations with the U.S. Government. The U.S. Department of the Interior, Office of Indian Affairs is the agency that identifies and recognizes Indian tribal entities for establishing and maintaining federal government-to-government relations with Native Americans. Those tribal nations, bands and groups that are recognized by the agency are listed below, with agency or area office of jurisdiction indicated. Included in most listings are governing bodies and leading personnel with e-mail addresses. Arranged alpha-geographically

The Chuloonawick Tribe was established as a Federally recognized tribe of Alaska in 1994 by the late William H. Akers. The tribe is considered a phantom village that serves over 100 members from various villages. The original site for Chuloonawick is located between two established villages of Emmonak and Kotlik. The Yupik meaning of Chuloonawick is "a place to salt fish". Chuloonawick Tribe has an office located in the village of Emmonak, which is located 120 miles Northwest of Bethel, Alaska; and 490 air miles from Alaska's largest city, Anchorage. We, a group of Alaskan Natives, residents of the State of Alaska, and citizens of the United States having a common bond as residents and descendants of the aboriginal natives within Alaska. As descendants of aboriginal Natives with Alaska, in order to protect and promote the best interests of the members and those eligible for membership, especially those surrounding their health, safety, education, welfare, and customary rights and practices.  The purpose of the Inupiat Community Tribal Council is to provide enrolled Inupiat members a direct and continuing means of citizen participation in government and local affairs. We are thirteen members, one from each village, and five from Barrow representing approximately 6300 enrolled members. Our terms are staggered with elections held every three years. We encourage you to participate and become a candidate for one of the council seats at the next election. General meetings of the Council are held at 6:30 PM on the first Thursday evening of each month in the ICAS Board room in Barrow, Alaska. Our location within our council boundaries are some of North America's most unique regions. Bordered by the foothills of the Brooks Range to the south and the Arctic Ocean on the north and west, and Canada to the east, the area encompasses 89,000 square miles. Fifteen percent of Alaska's land mass lies in this region, all of which is located above the Arctic Circle. Located within our boundaries geographically, the largest political subdivision in North America, are the native villages of Barrow; Atkasuk, Anaktuvuk Pass, Kaktovik, Nuiqsut, Point Hope, and Wainwright, Point Lay and the petroleum/industrial complex of Prudhoe Bay/Kuparuk. Pima Agency. Akimel O'otham (Pima) Historically, the Akimel O'otham and Tohono O'odham were some of the world's premier basketmakers, and the Tohono O'odham remain very active in this field. Pee-Posh (Maricopa) The Maricopa people were small bands living along the lower Gila and Colorado rivers. Each of these bands migrated eastward at different times. The Xalychidom (Maricopa of Lehi), left around 1825-1830. The last of these bands is said to have left the Colorado River in the late 1830's. Eventually these bands came together and became collectively known as the Maricopa. As they migrated eastward, they came upon the Pima tribe and established a relationship. Both tribes provided protection against the Yuman and Apache tribes. The Maricopa Tribe is known for their red clay pottery work. Maricopa pottery artwork and Pima baskets can be viewed at the Community's Hoohoogam Ki Museum.

Tribe: Cahuilla. Enrolled members: 10. Area: 500 acres. Attraction: Augustine Casino (391-9500); Website: www.augustinecasino.com. Projects: In December 2008, the Augustine Band of Cahuilla Indians established itself as a leader in Indian Country in the area of renewable energy. The Tribe was the first tribe in Southern California to develop a major solar energy project approved by the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA). The Tribe installed a megawatt photovoltaic plant on its reservation. The plant, located on the Augustine Solar Energy Park, produces enough energy to power a significant percentage of the total energy needs of the Tribe's business operations. In a few short years the project will not only pay for itself, but will also start earning a profit. The solar energy project represents a major step in achieving the Tribe's dual goals of becoming self-sufficient, and protecting the Earth's natural resources. Southern California Agency.

(760) 737-7628 Fax 747-8568; E-mail: inaja\_cosmit@hotmail.com

Rebecca Maxcy Osuna, Chairperson

The Inaja-Cosmit Reservation is located 36 miles northeast of San Diego. It is accessible via Interstate 8 east and California Route 67 north. Tribal lands consist of two parcels of rather remote and somewhat inaccessible land at the base of Cuyamaca Peak. Deep winter snows and a lack of facilities make these locations inhospitable to all but the hardiest. Members of the Inaja-Cosmit Band belong to the Kumeyaay Nation. Tribal lands of the Kumeyaay Nation extend from San Diego and Imperial counties in California to territories 60 miles south of the Mexican border. The Kumeyaays are members of the Yuman-language branch of the Hokan linguistic group. Tribe: Kumeyaay Diegueno. In residence: 15. Area: 852 acres. Southern California Agency.

Tribe: Micmac. Enrolled members: 1,250. Total Micmac population is about 15,000, most live in Canada. About 1,000 Micmac live in Maine and are the most traditional Indians in the eastern U.S. The Micmac Nation, today, is composed of seven districts with 29 bands and a population of approximately 30 thousand. The Micmac language is an Algonquin one, related to that of the Micmacs' southern neighbors, the Maliseets, Passamaquoddy, Penobscot & Abenaki. All these northeastern tribes are culturally and linguistically related.

Collectively, this group is called the "Wabanaki", which means "People of the Daybreak", or "Dawn land People" (wabun meaning "light" or "white", aki meaning "earth"). Like other tribes of Maine, the Micmac, continue to produce a variety of traditional baskets made of splint ash wood, birch bark and split cedar. The Micmac are recognized as excellent producers of porcupine quill on birch bark boxes and wooden flowers of strips of maple, cedar and white birch. On November 26, 1991 after complex legal maneuvering and political lobbying the Aroostook Band of Micmacs finally achieved Federal Recognition with the passage of the Aroostook Band of Micmacs Settlement Act. This act provided the Community with acknowledgment of its tribal status in the United States. Programs: Health and Housing; Head Start. Resources: Tribal Museum. Eastern Regional Office.

Eastern Regional Office. The Passamaquoddy Tribe, having two locations, is represented by the Joint Tribal Council which consists of the individual Tribal Councils of Indian Township, in Princeton, and at the the Pleasant Point Reservation (Sipayik) in Perry, Maine. The boundary cuts through the middle of Passamaquoddy Tribes homeland. The Passamaquoddy have occupied this watershed region for at least the past 600+ generations (12,000+ years). This new USA-Canada boundary line was created about 200 years ago & was imposed on the Passamaquoddy by the Jay Treaty of 1794. (Aboriginal Rights for the good stuff)...Interestingly, in 1974, the Jay Treaty was revisited when a group of eight Wabanaki (including Mi'kmaq, Maliseet, Passamaquoddy and Penobscot tribes people) challenged US immigration officials and committed an "illegal" border crossing.

Representatives: Gary Wheeler (Turtle Clan), Donald Jimerson (Bear Clan), Michael Barringer (Wolf Clan)
 People of the Great Swamp. The Cayuga Nation is a member of the Haudenosaunee or Iroquois. The Haudenosaunee is an alliance of six Native Nations that reside in the state of New York. The Nations that make up this confederacy are the Seneca, Cayuga, Onondaga, Oneida, Mohawk and the Tuscarora. The people of the Cayuga Nation have called the land surrounding Cayuga Lake their homeland for hundreds of years. Cayuga land lays between that of the Seneca Nation to the west and the Onondaga Nation to the east. Archeologists have found evidence of Cayuga settlements in many areas surrounding the lake including the present day villages of Union Springs, Aurora, Cayuga, Seneca Falls, Ithaca and Canoga. The Cayuga Nation focuses on Land Rights and Economic Development. The Nation continues to be challenged on its Treaty Rights and its established reservation. Its businesses also are challenged and are currently in litigation in New York State courts. The Nation has approximately 493 enrolled members who primarily live in Western New York, but also can be found throughout the United States. Land acquisition continues to be a primary focus within the Land Claim area both in Seneca and Cayuga counties. The Nation currently holds approximately 824 acres in its land portfolio inside the land claim. Tribe: Cayuga (member of Six Nations). Enrolled members: 500 in New York. In residence: 150. Area: 824 acres. Programs: Housing. 5,500. In residence: 3,300. Area: 563,916 acres located in Jefferson & Wasco

Counties, east of the Cascade Mountains. The Wasco bands on the Columbia

River were the eastern-most group of Chinookan-speaking Indians. The Warm Springs bands that lived along the Columbia's tributaries spoke Sahaptin.

Unlike the Wascoes, the Warm Springs bands moved between winter and summer villages, and depended more on game, roots and berries. However, salmon was also an important staple for the Warm Springs bands and, like the

Wascoes, they built elaborate scaffolding over waterfalls which allowed them to harvest fish with long-handled dip nets. Contact between the Warm Springs bands and the Wascoes was frequent, and, although they spoke different languages and observed different customs, they could converse and traded heavily. The Paiutes lived in southeastern Oregon & spoke a Shoshonean

dialect. Resources: Community Wellness Center; The Museum at Warm

Springs; KWSO 91.9 FM radio (553-1968). Programs: Language; Social &

Tribe: Muckleshoot. In residence: 3,300. Area: 1,959 acres located in King County. The Muckleshoot Indian Tribe membership is composed of descendants of Duwamish and Upper Puyallup people who inhabited Central Puget Sound for thousands of years before non-Indian settlement. The Tribe's name is derived from the native name for the prairie on which the Muckleshoot Reservation was established. Following the Reservation's establishment in 1857, the Tribe and its members came to be known as Muckleshoot, rather than by the historic tribal names of their Duwamish and Upper Puyallup ancestors. Today, the United States recognizes the Muckleshoot Tribe as a tribal successor to the Duwamish and Upper Puyallup bands from which the Tribe's membership descends. Resources: Muckleshoot Tribal School; Muckleshoot Tribal College. Programs: Education; Health and Wellness; Community Services; Human Resources; Community Development; Housing; Recreation; Head Start. Attractions: White River Amphitheatre; Muckleshoot Casino, Muckleshoot Casino II; Muckleshoot Bingo; Salish Lodge; Emerald Downs Racetrack. Activities: Muckleshoot Powwow; First Salmon Ceremony. Publication: Muckleshoot Monthly (939-3311). Elders Council of Judges: Lorna Garfield Donaghy, Tom Beck, Bea Nelson
The mission of the Nulhegan Band of the Coosuk Abenaki Nation is to strengthen our government; to build our community, and ensure sustainability; to protect our customs and traditions; and to continue to promote our culture and celebrate our heritage while sharing it with those around us. The Nulhegan Abenaki tribe is nestled among the lakes, rivers, and forests of N'dakinna's northern range and headquartered in the Northeast Kingdom at Barton, VT. We are one of the largest Abenaki Tribes still in existence today. As a nomadic and place-based people, we live and travel throughout our greater Western Abenaki territories as our ancestors did. These traditional homelands we call N'dakinna include Vermont, New Hampshire, and parts of Canada, Maine, and Massachusetts.

These offices directly administer or fund tribally operated BIA infrastructure, economic development, law enforcement and justice, social services (including child welfare), tribal governance, and trust land and natural and energy resources management programs for the nation’s 573 federally recognized American Indian and Alaska Native tribes through 12 regional offices and 81 agencies.

BUREAU OF INDIAN EDUCATION (BIE)

1849 C St., NW, MS-3642-MIB • WASHINGTON, DC 20240
(202) 208-7163; Tony Dearman (Cherokee), Director

The BIE provides education services to approximately 42,000 Indian students. Responsible for the line direction and management of all education functions, including the formation of policies and procedures, the supervision of all program activities and the approval of the expenditure of funds appropriated for education functions. Mission: is to provide quality education opportunities from early childhood through life in accordance with a tribe’s needs for cultural and economic wellbeing, in keeping with the wide diversity of Indian tribes and Alaska Native villages as distinct cultural and governmental entities. Further, the BIE is to manifest consideration of the whole person by taking into account the spiritual, mental, physical, and cultural aspects of the individual within his or her family and tribal or village context. The BIE school system employs thousands of teachers, administrators and support personnel, while many more work in tribal school systems.

BUREAU OF TRUST FUNDS ADMINISTRATION (BTFA)

1849 C St., NW, MS-3642-MIB • Washington, DC 20240
(202) 208-7163

Jerry Gidner (Sault Ste Marie Chippewa), Director (2020-present)
Website: www.jerrygidner.com; E-mail: jerrygidner@gmail.com

The mission of the Bureau of Trust Funds Management is to manage the financial assets of trust beneficiaries. This effort is integrally related to Interior’s goal of meeting its responsibilities to American Indians. The BTFA will report to the Assistant Secretary - Indian Affairs Tara Katuk Sweeney and assume responsibility for financial operations functions currently performed by the Office of the Special Trustee for American Indians (OST) effective October 1, 2020. Currently, OST receipts account for the disbursement of more than $1 billion annually of Trust monies and have more than $5 billion under active day-to-day management and investment on behalf of Tribes and individuals. The Order is consistent with the Department’s FY 2021 Budget proposal to ensure a smooth transition of important Trust financial operations and other functions that have accrued to OST over time, along with related functions performed by the Land Buy-Back Program for Tribal Nations and the Office of Historical Trust Accounting, to the BTFA. No additional changes are proposed, and no employee relocations or loss in positions would occur with this realignment. The law that created OST, the American Indian Trust Fund Management Reform Act of 1994, envisioned that OST would be terminated after trust reforms had been completed. As the Indian trust management system was gradually reformed, however, it became apparent to Interior that going back to the old way of doing business was unacceptable. Issuance of this Order is a critical step that will institutionalize and make permanent OST’s best practices, improve communication and coordination and enhance Interior’s ability to deliver services to Indian Country.

Office of the Chief Financial Officer (OCFO) Indian Affairs

12220 Sunrise Valley Dr., Reston, VA 20191
(703) 390-6485 Fax 390-6304

James Schock, Chief Financial Officer

The office is headed by the Chief Financial Officer (CFO) and Deputy Chief Financial Officer (DCFO) who serve as the principal financial management advisors to the Assistant Secretary-Indian Affairs and other senior Indian Affairs officials. It is comprised of the following four divisions: Acquisitions and Property Management; Financial Systems; Accounting Operations; Financial Reporting and Analysis. Located in Reston, VA, the CFO is the primary conduit to the Department’s financial management community. The CFO also serves as head of the contracting activity, the senior Indian Affairs acquisition official, the audit liaison officer, and the management control coordinator for Indian Affairs. The OCFO is responsible for all aspects of financial management, including loan and construction accounting; power and irrigation billings and collections; acquisitions and grants; and property and space management activities. The OCFO prepares Indian Affairs financial statements and is the primary liaison with the Department’s Office of Inspector General. (West): Bureau of Indian Affairs, 1001 Indian School Road, NW,
Albuquerque, NM 87104 (505) 563-3320 Fax 563-3046

Mission: To promote awareness of tribal governmental responsibilities and processes, and to provide tribes with the resources they need to foster strong and stable tribal governments in exercising their rights as sovereign nations. In accordance with the long-standing Federal policy of supporting Indian self-determination as expressed in the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, as amended Public Law 93-638; Tribal Government Services promotes the sovereignty of federally recognized Tribes. Support provided includes research and preparation of Certificate of Degree of Indian Blood (CDIB) forms, review of tribal resolutions, liquor ordinances, proposed governing documents requiring action by the BIA line officials, preparation of membership rolls for special (Secretarial) elections or for per capita distributions, and administration of special elections per 25 C.F.R. 81. Tribal Enrollment: Tribal Enrollment processes enrollment appeals for members of tribes that have adverse enrollment actions by Bureau officials. The program develops or updates policies, regulations and guidelines concerning tribal enrollment systems. As more tribes develop Indian Gaming activities, the Tribal Enrollment was compelled to serve as a clearinghouse for enrollment information for those individuals seeking to become members of Federally recognized tribes. The functions of Tribal Relations include the review and approval of tribal organic documents as required by Federal (25 U.S.C. 476) or Tribal law. The organic documents may include new constitutions primarily for the newly recognized tribes, amendments to existing constitutions or total revisions of existing constitutions. Tribal Relations staff provides technical assistance to tribes with the initial drafting of a new constitution, an amendment or revision. Tribal Relations reviews Tribal and/or Federal law to determine the tribal officials with whom the BIA maintains a government-to-government relationship and associated with this, maintains a Tribal Leader's Directory. The division publishes an annual Federal Tribal Entities list; the list is widely used by other Federal agencies usually to verify that a tribe is eligible to receive Federal funding provided by that agency. Tribal Claims: Pursuant to the Indian Tribal Judgment Funds Use or Distribution Act, 87 Stat. 466, as amended, the BIA prepares a plan for the use or distribution of funds awarded in satisfaction of a judgment of the Indian Claims Commission of the United States Court of Federal Claims in favor of an Indian tribe. The Bureau submits the plan to Congress. Where two or more tribal governments are beneficiaries, the Secretary of the Interior must submit proposed legislation to Congress dividing the judgment funds. As part of the preparation for the plan or proposed legislation, the Tribal Claims staff serves as negotiators in gaining the consent of the tribal governments concerning the division of the funds.

1951 Constitution Ave, NW, MS-355G SIB, Washington, DC 20245
(202) 219-0240 Fax 219-1404; Sharee Freeman, Director

The Office is responsible for implementation of the Tribal Self Governance Act of 1994, including development and implementation of regulations, policies, and guidance in support of self-governance initiatives. The staff negotiates annual funding agreements with eligible tribes and consortia, coordinates the collection of budget and performance data from self-governance tribes, and resolves issues that are identified in financial and program audits of self-governance operations. The Office works with tribal governments to protect and support tribal sovereignty within a Government-to-Government partnership and to advocate for the transfer of Federal programmatic authorities and resources to tribal governments in accordance with tribal self-governance statutes and policies. Included in the Appendices is a table illustrating tribal participation in Self-Governance. The staff works with self-governance tribes to implement and resolve issues or problems associated with self-governance agreements. Self-governance tribes represent nearly 40 percent of all federally recognized tribes nationwide. Office provides financial management, budgeting, accounting and contracting services for an estimated $400 million in funds annually that are allocated or awarded to self-governance tribes, including reprogramming within Operation of Indian Programs (OIP) and transfers from other Federal programs.

Vincent G. Logan (Osage), Special Trustee for American Indians
Jerry Gidner, Principal Deputy Special Trustee

Established by the American Indian Trust Fund Management Reform Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-412), OST was created to improve the accountability and management of Indian funds held in trust by the federal government. As trustee, DOI has the primary fiduciary responsibility to manage both tribal trust funds and Individual Indian Money (IIM) accounts. The purpose of OST is to provide oversight, reform and coordination of the policies, procedures, systems and practices used by various agencies to manage Indian trust assets. This effort is integrally related to DOI's goal of meeting its responsibilities to American Indians. The goals of OST include: to protect and preserve Indian trust assets and collect and accurately account for income due beneficiaries; to obtain agreement with all tribal and individual Indian account holders on the balances in their trust accounts in a manner that is fair to both the Indian community and the general public, does not impair or impede reform efforts, and does not result in reductions in Indian programs; and to provide timely and responsive customer services to account holders.

The Office of Native American Affairs mission is to ensure that American Indians, Alaska Natives and Native Hawaiians seeking to create, develop and expand small businesses have full access to the necessary business development and expansion tools available through the Agency's entrepreneurial development, lending and procurement programs. Goal: To promote and support Native American entrepreneurs. We engage in numerous outreach activities including tribal consultations, development and distribution of promotional materials, attendance and participation in national economic development conferences. Activities: Empowerment Workshops. With the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, the U.S. Small Business Administration has expanded its reach to Indian Country entrepreneurs in a big way. 2021 marks the first in which the SBA partnered with Sister Sky, Inc., a professional services provider and subsidiary of the nationally recognized health and wellness brand to host the workshops. The Empowerment Workshops are offered free of charge and seek to provide entrepreneurs and aspiring businesspeople inside Indian Country with the foundational skills and necessary support to create thriving businesses. This year also saw the traditionally in-person Empowerment Workshops transition to a virtual environment for the first time. While necessary during the global pandemic, executives from Sister Sky and SBA administrators hope the virtual format will continue to allow more entrepreneurs from Indian Country to access the service in the years to come. The virtual Empowerment Workshops include eight modules covering foundational topics in business, ranging from marketing processes and financial management, to financing and cashflow. Since transitioning to a virtual format, Sister Sky offers both live, interactive webinars and archived copies of the material for participants to view at their convenience. The workshops also cover various financial programs and other developmental services provided by the SBA.

Located in North-Central Minnesota, the Red Lake Reservation is home to the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians. In January 1997, the Red Lake tribe entered into a self-governance compact with the federal government thereby allowing the Red Lake tribe to manage certain trust and Indian services programs previously being managed by the BIA. One of these trust programs, Forestry, was included in the compact that allowed for management of the program by the tribe. As such, one "residual" Forestry position was established at Red Lake to oversee the governments trust responsibility to the tribe, and this Forester position still exists today at the Red Lake Agency.

Alison Barkoff, Acting Administrator & Assistant Secretary for Aging (2021-)

Kelly Cronin, Deputy Administrator, Center for Innovation & Partnership Services for Native Americans (OAA Title VI) ACL funds programs that support American Indians, Alaska Natives and Native Americans in the areas of nutrition, supportive services for older adults, and caregiver services. The nutrition and supportive services grants include congregate and home-delivered meals, information and referral, transportation, personal care, chores, health promotion and disease prevention, and other supportive services. The caregiver services grants include assisting families in caring for older relatives with chronic illness or disability, and grandparents caring for grandchildren. There are other necessary services provided by ACL grants so the people we serve have meaningful support to help them live independently in their communities. In 1978, the Older Americans Act was amended to include Title VI that established programs for the provision of nutrition and supportive services for Native Americans (American Indians, Alaska Natives and Native Hawaiians). The program has since expanded to include caregiver support services. Eligible Tribal organizations receive grants in support of the delivery of home and community-based supportive services for their elders, including nutrition services and support for family and informal caregivers. The Authorizing Legislation comes from Sections 613, 623 and 631 of the Older Americans Act of 1965, as amended.

Katherine Slick, ACHP Foundation President

ACHP entered into an agreement with Salish Kootenai College (SKC) in Pablo, Montana, and the ACHP Foundation on September 23, 2019 to provide educational, personal development, and professional growth opportunities to students in the Tribal Historic Preservation and Tribal Governance and Administration degree programs. As one of her first official actions as chairman since being confirmed by the U.S. Senate in June, Jorjani signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the College, which provides post-secondary educational opportunities for Native Americans, perpetuating the cultures of the Confederated Tribes of the Flathead Nation. "The ACHP has made it a priority to build a more inclusive historic preservation community through partnering with colleges and universities to educate young people and provide pathways into historic preservation careers," Chairman Jorjani said. "This partnership will help the ACHP advance tribal historic preservation and support new tribal preservationists as they enter the field. We hope this will lead to exciting and new opportunities for the historic preservation students here at Salish Kootenai College." The ACHP's Office of Native American Affairs (ONAA) launched a Native Youth Initiative in 2015 to introduce Native youth to historic preservation as a potential career choice and to provide Native youth an opportunity to voice concerns regarding the protection of sacred sites. In 2016, ONAA launched a program to offer distance learning to students in the tribal historic preservation program at SKC and, last year, determined the most effective way to achieve its program goals would be through a long-term partnership with the college. SKC is the only tribal college that offers two- and four-year degree programs in Tribal Historic Preservation as well as other related degree programs, educating future Tribal Historic Preservation Officers (THPO), tribal archaeologists, and tribal leaders that will both participate in and influence the future of historic preservation. Library: Indian Tribes and Native Hawaiians Digital Library.

Description: A non-profit media arts center Mission: To encourage Native filmmakers; to develop Indian and non-Indian audiences for this work; to advocate for authentic visual and work-force representations of Indians in the media; to open up opportunities for Native Americans to enter the workforce of the creative economy. Programs: Tribal Touring (taking Native films and filmmakers on the road); Summer Projects. Activities: Digital Training Workshops; Community Film Festival; American Indian Film Festival; Annual Silver Star Powwow and Indian Market. The roots of the American Indian Film Festival stretch back to 1975 when the first American Indian Film Festival was presented in Seattle by the late Michael Smith (Fort Peck Sioux). In 1977, he relocated the festival to San Francisco where it found its permanent home. AIFI was incorporated in 1979, with the late Will Sampson (One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest) among its founding members. Today AIFI is the major presenter of Native American media arts in California, and the festival is the world's oldest and most recognized international film exposition dedicated to Native American cinematic achievements. AIFI encourages Indian and non-Indian filmmakers to bring to the broader media culture of Native voices, viewpoints and stories that have been historically excluded from mainstream media; to develop Indian and non-Indian audience for this work; to advocate for authentic visual and workforce representation for Indians in the media; and open up opportunities for native Americans.

Description: Staff of 12 Indian law graduates and attorneys; located at the University of New Mexico, School of Law. Purpose: To provide training and technical assistance to Native Americans and First Nation communities; to render services, primarily research and training, of a broad legal and governmental nature; and to assist tribes in making legal decisions when assistance is necessary. Programs: The Pre-Law Summer Institute (PLSI) for American Indians and Alaska Natives. Helped found and currently provides staff support to the Commission on State-Tribal Relations; provides individualized training for tribal judges and tribal prosecutors; administers the Special Scholarship Program in Law for American Indians through which students receive admission advice, financial assistance, tutorial aid, and job placement services; provides assistance to Alaskan natives; sponsors conferences and seminars. Resources: American Indian Prevention Resource Center; OU Native American Studies Department; OU Native American Law Program; Southwest Intertribal Court of Appeals (SWITCA) Program provides an appellate court forum for tribes located in New Mexico, Arizona, southern Colorado, and west Texas. Since its inception in 1989, SWITCA has allowed tribal courts to bring cases before a panel of experienced judges to render decisions at the appellate level for those tribes that do not have the financial means or governmental infrastructure to administer a court of appeals for tribal court decisions. Appellate services are available without cost to member tribes. Additionally, SWITCA provides training, technical assistance, legal research, and support services to tribal courts, tribal judges, and tribal court staff in the region in an effort to strengthen tribal and Pueblo court systems and tribal jurisdiction. Who is Eligible to Join? Federally recognized Tribes and Pueblos in New Mexico, Arizona, southern Colorado, and west Texas may join the Court to receive impartial appellate review of lower court decisions. SWITCA's jurisdiction is defined by the participating Pueblo and tribal governments. A Tribe may join SWITCA by tribal resolution. Each Tribe defines SWITCA's authority for itself and may create any one of a variety of uses for the Court. Curriculum: Nee-Kon'-Nah Time – curriculum of prevention activities designed for use with 3 to 5 year old children in American Indian head start & preschool programs. Video & Presentation Kit: Remembering What We Know," a 12-minute movie for informing and stimulating discussions with high school & young adult age groups. Publications: American Indian Law Newsletter, bimonthly; cultural curriculum lessons and workshop proceedings; manuals for tribal judges and prosecutors, and on Indian criminal court procedures. Library. Established 1967.

Mission: To develop culturally appropriate resources to meet the needs of American Indian communities. AIRC provides professional expertise to and on behalf of American Indian tribes, organizations, and schools, and other interested agencies in the following areas: Training and technical assistance in the areas of education, health, and social services; Program development and evaluation; Management analysis and assistance; Experimental, historical, and survey research; Video production; Curriculum development. AIRC has two divisions, Educational Talent Search (ETS) and the Institute for Native Justice (INJ). Recent completed projects include Youth Empowerment Solutions (YES Project) and Native Americans Teaming In Vision Empowerment (Project NATIVE), both funded under Department of Health and the Human Services' Administration for Children and Families. AIRC has served as training and technical assistance specialists for the Office on Violence Against Women under the Department of Justice since 2006. AIRC also successfully implemented a breast cancer awareness and education project from 2000 to 2007, funded by the Avon Foundation. AIRC has focused its youth education development efforts through the Educational Talent Search grant for 23 years. Funded by the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Postsecondary Education, this grant serves children in grades 8-12 who are low income and are the first generation in their family to attend college. ETS guidance specialists work with these children to encourage them to stay in school, graduate high school, and go on to postsecondary education such as college, vocational-technical school, or the military. ETS also takes students on field trips, exposing them to different careers and tours of college campuses. Students also receive assistance with scholarship searches and financial aid form completion. Currently, ETS serves 715 students in 10 schools, most of which are in Adair, Cherokee, Delaware, and Mayes Counties. The EAGLE Scholars grant, a demonstration grant through the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Indian Education, focused on a core group of students in three schools, tracking them from their sophomore to their senior year of high school. Similar to the Educational Talent Search grant, EAGLE Scholars participants received college preparatory services, but unlike Talent Search, EAGLE Scholars participants must be Native American. Students also worked on an animation project animating a traditional Native story using Claymation, telling the stories in the Cherokee language using English subtitles. In the past 20 years, AIRC operated five educational personnel training programs. Approximately 117 students have graduated with a Bachelor, Master, or Doctorate degree from these programs. The Community Technology Centers operated by AIRC provided two rural Indian communities, one Cherokee and one Creek, with six technology-based programs. These programs included community access to computer technology, technology-based after-school activities, adult education, technology-based career development and job preparation, electronic small business and commerce activities, and technology-based family activities. AIRC completed two major curriculum projects. One was a gender equity curriculum for secondary age students, based on Cherokee culture and implemented in 10 schools throughout northeastern Oklahoma. AIRC has developed and implemented a summer academic enrichment program for the U.S. Department of Labor. AIRC has developed the capabilities to provide technology leadership to schools, tribes, and service agencies in this region. AIRC has been a resource to agencies needing expertise in various computer and digital technology by providing technological assistance to school districts who wanted to establish computer learning centers. Also, AIRC has been involved in the production of videos for programs funded by the U.S. Department of Labor and the Indian Health Service. To complete a video project entitled, "Strengthen the Heart Beat," for the National Institute of Heart, Lung, and Blood, AIRC purchased a professional video camera and a state-of-the-art computer for digital video editing. The Technology Specialist and another member of AIRC's staff are trained in the use of this equipment as well as the software necessary for digital video editing and visual effects. AIRC has also completed two movies for the Bemidji Area Indian Health Service office: "Quality Care for Life" which explains Contract Healthcare and "Saving Grace" which explains Medicare benefits. Another achievement is the Youth Empowerment Solutions ("Y.E.S.") Project. This project provides management support, training and technical assistance for 11 youth serving agencies in northeastern Oklahoma. Funded by the Communities Empowering Youth (CEY) of the Compassion Capital Fund, this three-year project is designed to build the management and program capacity of these organizations by increasing the number of youth served and providing more effective programming and advance organizational sustainability so that they continue to provide youth programming for many years to come. AIRC has recently completed Project NATIVE (Native Americans Teaming In Visual Empowerment). Funded by the Department of Health and Human Services, this grant allowed for 12 outreach workers to be trained in working with the visually impaired. The outreach workers held nine three-weekend workshops aimed at improving the quality of life for Native Americans suffering from vision diseases such as macular degeneration, diabetic retinopathy and glaucoma. Workshop topics included self-advocacy, life skills, mobility and orientation, etc. After the workshops, outreach workers delivered items ordered by attendees and spend time teaching how to use them. The Institute for Native Justice, a division of AIRC, Inc., supports the elimination of domestic and sexual violence in Indian communities by providing training and technical assistance addressing safety, confidentiality and social change in tribal and rural communities where there are few or no resources for victims. The Institute's training and technical assistance builds and assesses organizational and community capacity, increases understanding of domestic and sexual violence victim issues, and trains advocate staff to promote the work of tribal communities to reduce and eliminate violence. Established 1983.

Chadwick Allen, SAIL Editor (Ohio State University)
Robert Nelson, Historian (University of Richmond (VA))

Description: A professional academic organization created to promote the study, criticism, and research of American Indian written and oral literary traditions. ASAIL holds an annual business meeting at the Native American Literature Symposium. ASAIL is an affiliate with the Modern Language Association (MLA). ASAIL sponsors panels at the MLA's annual meeting, the Native American Literature Symposium, the American Literature Association (ALA), and the Society for the Study of American Women Writers (SSAWW) conferences. Our conference participation, along with our journal, Studies in American Indian Literatures, ensures that members have multiple opportunities to present, publish and debate innovative research on American Indian and Aboriginal languages, literature, culture and aesthetics. ASAIL's current membership includes leading scholars, writers, and activists committed to the interdisciplinary study and continuance of American Indian and indigenous languages, cultures, and aesthetic traditions. Whether you are a first-time visitor to our site or a long-term member of ASAIL, you will find resources here on teaching, researching and writing about American Indian and indigenous literatures. In addition, you will find information about upcoming conferences as well as Calls for Papers and current job offerings around the country. Our Association takes mentorship seriously, and to help graduate students begin their academic careers, we offer conference travel fellowships to offset expenses for students to present their research. Colleagues will find syllabi, language resources, and a community of faculty to aid their own research and teaching expertise. If you aren't already a member, I welcome you to our website and encourage you to join ASAIL! Publication: Studies in American Indian Literatures, quarterly scholarly journal focusing exclusively on American Indian literatures.

Ian Skorodin, President and CEO

Patricia Gomes, Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer

Manuel Hamilton, Executive Vice President, Government Affairs

A nonprofit media arts organization founded in 2004 to foster understanding of the culture, traditions and issues of contemporary Native Americans, and to offer educational opportunities to Native American communities through multimedia programs. Oversees several Native American endeavors, including the LA Skins Fest, the LA SKINS MUSIC FEST, and Skinsplex. LA Skins Fest runs the annual Native American TV Writers Lab, an intensive TV writing workshop that prepares Native American writers for writing careers at major television networks. Barcid projects include preservation of decaying library materials that pertain to Native American history, video production of PSAs for local Native American non-profits, and the LA Skins Fest. The foundation serves Native American and non-Native populations throughout Native Youth Multimedia Workshops which teach participants writing, directing, camera operation, and video editing; the Los Angeles Skins Film Festival, a film festival that takes place in Los Angeles during November and it promotes Native America cinema; Native American Director and Writer Workshops which mentor Native American artists on a professional level; and the Los Angeles Skins Music Festival, summer music concert that promotes Native American contemporary musicians. Barcid's goal is to use media as a tool for cultural, educational, technological and economic development.

Purpose: To create sustainable programs designed by Native Americans for Native American youth that will promote good health and leadership development. To help tribal nations build the capacity to design and sustain effective sports, wellness and youth development programs for Native American youth. Activities: Holds an annual Healthy Kids! Healthy Futures! Conference at the Sandia Resort and Casino in September. This annual event brings together Native experts, organizations and communities to learn and share prevention strategies and methods that improve the health and happiness of Native American children. Each year, NB3 Foundation brings together motivating speakers and doers from across the country to showcase their work. This year will feature Chef Sean Sherman, Founder of The Sioux Chef, coaching certification by UP2US Sports and site visits to the Native American Community Academy and the South Valley Economic Development Center. Locally featured speakers include representatives from the Keres Children's Learning Center, Laguna Pueblo and Zuni Pueblo. People come from as far away as Alaska to Arizona because they are all committed to improving the health of Native children. Focus is on healthy nutrition, physical activity, youth leadership and development and cultural connections, attendees will gain valuable hands on knowledge and resources they can take back to their communities. Established 2005.

Description: Indigenous peoples pursuing survival, sovereignty and self-determination inevitably must engage with the U.S. government. Whether it be to regain title & control over tribal lands, pursue federal funding to support tribal government programs, to reform federal law to expand tribal economies, or to expand economic opportunities for Alaska Native Corporations, American officials must act to reverse the effects of colonization. Our role is to develop and advocate for winning strategies to persuade American officials to address your concerns. Gaming and hospitality is a $31 billion industry that is the primary source of jobs and economic success in Indian Country. As competition in the gaming space grows, government and private interests may seek to undermine tribal gaming opportunities and promote adverse changes to the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. Their role is to assist in protecting the Indian gaming investment, and ensure that federal officials respect tribal sovereignty in their role as regulators and government partners.

Olivia Trujillo, Training Program Coordinator

Mission: To work in partnership with tribes to research, design, implement, and evaluate interventions to raise the health and wellbeing of American Indians to the highest possible level. Facilities & Personnel: The placement within the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions allows the Center to draw on vast intellectual resources and multi-disciplined approaches to address tribes' priority health and social problems. The Center currently operates seven health stations on the Navajo (AZ/NM), White Mountain Apache (AZ), and Wind River

(WY) Reservations, whose combined populations represent about one-fourth of American Indians living on reservations in the U.S. Over the past five years, the Center has conducted additional projects with tribes in North Carolina, California, South Dakota, Alaska, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Oklahoma. More than half of the Center's 70-person staff is American Indian, including an American Indian physician, more than 30 Native outreach workers, and four field-based project coordinators. Programs: All programs are crafted to increase the skill and capacity of tribes. Each initiative includes a training and employment component to ensure that indigenous workers carry out the work. For the NATIVEVISION program (www.nativevision.org), the Center provides ongoing technical expertise to Native communities to support all aspects of the planning, design, implementation and evaluation of NATIVEVISION programs. Johns Hopkins employs local program coordinators to oversee the day-to-day operations of the NATIVEVISION on the reservations involved. Activities: Operates an annual Sports Camp that is helped funded by the NFL (National Football league) Players Association (www.nflpa.org). It also helps with the management of the camp by recruiting pro athletes from various sports to adopt and routinely visit the NATIVE VISION communities across the America. The Nick Lowery (ex-NFL player) Foundation (www.nicklowery.com) assists with youth development strategies, as well as recruitment of athletes and Native American role models, and development of financial resources. Publication: Newsletter. Established 1991.

Gregory Schaaf, PhD, Director

Angie Van Schaaf, Assistant Director

Activities/Programs: "The American Indian Art Series," is a planned 20-vol. series featuring American Indian artist biographical profiles grouped by art form. Over 17,000 Native American artists have been profiled in the first nine volumes of the American Indian Art Series. Each large hardback volume is lavishly illustrated with 2,000 color and historic photographs. The text provides a quick reference to each artist's detailed biographical profile. Three volumes feature 5,500 Native American Turquoise jewelry artists: Navajo, Hopi, Zuni, Kewa - Santo Domingo, Apache, Iroquois, Haida, Tsimshian, Tlingit, Santa Clara, San Juan, Isleta, San Felipe, Taos, Jemez, Kiowa, Sac & Fox, Comanche, Delaware, Shawnee, Cherokee, and Oneida. The Natural Turquoise Directory helps to identify different types of gem-quality, American turquoise. Hallmark indexes helps to identify who made your jewelry. These are the usual tools to learn the history of jewelry of Native American. Three volumes feature 3,750 Pueblo Indian pottery artists: Hopi-Tewa, Acoma, Santa Clara, San Ildefonso, Santo Domingo, Cochiti, and many more. Family Trees illustrate how the art of pottery was passed down from generation to generation. Other volumes feature 2,000 Navajo rug weavers, 1,600 Hopi Katsina carvers, 1,500 Native American basket makers from throughout the Southwest and California. These biographical reference books serve the general public, Native artists, Indian people, Indian art collectors and traders, galleries, museums, schools and libraries. There is a small library and archives featuring over 100,000 documents. Publications: Beyond the "American Indian Art Series," CIAC also distributes other works by Dr. Gregory Schaaf. Established 1972.

Shaquita Bell (Cherokee), MD, FAAP, Chairperson

Pediatricians from the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) have been meeting to advocate for the health needs of American Indian and Alaska Native children. This committee, now called the AAP Committee on Native American Child Health (CONACH), offers its expertise to individuals and groups concerned about the issues facing Native American children. Members of the CONACH are selected for their willingness to advocate on behalf of Native American children and for their previous experience in working directly with young Native Americans. Committee members maintain contact with tribal, urban, and Indian Health Service (IHS) programs, and keep up with important changes, legislation, and regulations that affect Native American health in general (e.g., the Indian Self Determination and Education Assistance Act) and Native American child health in particular. The committee meets twice a year. Each meeting addresses the major problems that affect Native American children and youth and how committee members and pediatricians can deal with these problems. The International Meeting on Indigenous Child Health is held every other odd year (last weekend in March) focusing on innovative clinical care models & community-based public health approaches for children and youth in First Nations, Inuit, Métis, American Indian, Alaska Native and other Indigenous communities around the world. Co-hosted by the Canadian Paediatric Society and the American Academy of Pediatrics, this meeting brings together health care providers and researchers working with children, youth and families in American Indian, Alaska Native, First Nations, Inuit, Métis and Indigenous communities. Activities: Conducts pediatric consultation visits and continuing medical education presentations to chosen areas within the Indian Health Service (IHS); strengthen ties with Indian tribes, especially those responsible for their own health care; survey IHS sites to determine pediatric locum tenens opportunities and share this information with interested pediatricians; presents an annual Native American Child Health Advocacy award to individuals who have made a significant contribution to improving the health of Native American children. Awards, honors: Native American Child Health Advocacy Award. Publications: Catalogue available. Library. Established 1965.

Mission: To provide opportunities for Native people to develop financial assets and create wealth by assisting in the establishment of strong, permanent institutions and programs contributing to economic independence and strengthening sovereignty for all Native communities. Oweesta is the only existing Native CDFI intermediary offering financial products and development services exclusively to Native CDFIs and Native communities. Specifically, Oweesta provides training, technical assistance, investments, research, and policy advocacy to help Native communities develop an integrated range of asset-building products and services, including financial education and financial products. Asset-building tools stimulate reservation economies by providing tribal members the opportunity to acquire financial management skills and build and accumulate assets through small business creation, homeownership, education, and much more.

Formerly, First Nations Orphan Association (FNOA). FNOA was born out of a grassroots effort to bring awareness and healing to Indian communities impacted by adoption and foster care. After several years it became apparent there needs to be a more formalized approach. First Nations Repatriation Institute (FNRI) will pick up and expand the original work of FNOA. It will be a resource to adoptees connecting them with other adoptees and resources. The goals are focused in Education, Scholarship and Advocacy. Founded 2001.

Mission: To strengthen our Tribal communities by creating a forum for leaders to come together to address the issues of domestic violence and sexual assault. We are committed to ending all forms of violence by providing culturally relevant services and resources and facilitating the provision of those services by others in our communities. First Nations Women's Alliance was created from the "Native American Domestic Violence Forum." The Forum began in 1996 as a committee of the North Dakota Council on Abused Women's Services (NDCAWS) in order to more effectively respond to the needs and concerns of North Dakota domestic violence/sexual assault programs serving Native American communities. In 2007, FNWA obtained federal funding for the formation of a tribal coalition, and subsequently obtained a 501 (c) 3 status. The board of directors is made up of the program directors of each of the reservation-based programs and one at large member. Board of Directors: Imogene Belgarde - Director, Spirit Lake Victim Assistance Program; Sadie Young Bird - Director Ft Berthold Coalition Against Violence Board President; Cheryl Donovan Trenton Indian Service Area; Amber Warman - United Tribes Technical College Campus Violence Program; Melissa Merrick-Brady, At Large Member; Rev Larry Thiele Pastor, Dakota Oyate Lutheran Church; Jessica Young Bird - Standing Rock, OVW Shelter Manager; Lynn Cadotte, Director, Pretty Bird Women House.

Four Directions, Inc., believes voting is within our sacred circle when it comes to preserving their way of life. We are committed to full enfranchisement as a crucial way to navigate a stronger future for our Native communities. An official partner of the Coalition of Large Tribes, Four Directions has become a nationally renowned voting rights leader. In 2002, Oliver and Barb Semans organized Native voter registration drives on South Dakota's Indian reservations. From those humble beginnings, Four Directions has leveraged strong relationships with Tribes in Nevada, Arizona, Montana, North Carolina, Minnesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota to make a critical difference in close federal elections. Four Directions has also partnered with preeminent organizations, including the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, the American Civil Liberties Union Voting Rights Project, and the National Congress of American Indians, to extend equal access to the ballot box across Indian Country. Four main priorities anchor the Four Directions approach: Native voting rights, voter empowerment, voter protection, and voter engagement. Our case studies below are organized into these four categories. In Montana and South Dakota, Four Directions advanced litigation supported by the U.S. Department of Justice to secure equal access to in-person absentee (often called "early") voting. In South Dakota, Four Directions empowered Native voters through aggressive GOTV operations that nearly doubled Native voter turnout in consecutive federal elections. Four Directions has partnered with lawyers at top law firms such as Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman for Native voter protection that ensures all Native voters are free from intimidation, coercion, and misinformation. In Minnesota, Four Directions engaged Tribal leaders and local governments across three Indian reservations in five counties to open satellite voting offices for in-person absentee voting. With the Four Directions approach, Native voters can swing elections, accumulate power, and take their rightful place in the political landscape, thus protecting our treaties, Tribal sovereignty, and way of life. Sponsors: Barona Band of Mission Indians; Fort McDowell Yavapai Nation/Lower Sioux Indian Community; Lytton Rancheria - Lytton Band of Pomo Indians Mille Lacs Band of Ojibwe; Prairie Island Indian Community; Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians Shakopee Mdewakanton Sioux Community Sisseton-Wahpeton Oyate; Soboba Band of Luiseno Indians Tule River Tribe; Viejas Band of Kumeyaay Indians. Program Partners: Blackfeet Nation; Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe; Crow Creek; Sioux Tribe; Crow

Website: www.illuminatives.org

Crystal Echo Hawk (Pawnee), Founder and CEO

Created and led by Native peoples, IllumiNative is a new nonprofit initiative designed to increase the visibility of – and challenge the negative narrative about – Native Nations and peoples in American society. IllumiNative was founded by Crystal Echo Hawk, President of Echo Hawk Consulting, and a group of respected Native artists, thought leaders and allies, to capitalize on the findings of Reclaiming Native Truth (RNT) – the largest public opinion research and strategy setting initiative ever conducted for, and about, Native Americans. The data presented in RNT concluded that pop culture, media and K-12 education drive and perpetuate the negative stereotypes and myths and has led to the erasure of Native peoples. By honing IllumiNative's focus on these drivers, this initiative will provide opportunities to not only substantially increase accurate and positive representations of Native peoples, but also positively impact policy and end the continued discrimination and disparities faced by Native communities. By supporting & illuminating contemporary Native voices, stories, issues and ideas in popular culture and influential social institutions – including the entertainment industry, media, K-12 education, philanthropy, and government – IllumiNative advances an important and powerful new narrative about Native peoples through the following: • Messaging: Developing and sharing fact-based messaging and materials that advance a more positive, inspiring & accurate narrative about Native peoples & Native communities. • Amplifying: Developing a national campaign in partnership with a broad coalition of tribes, Native organizations, youth and allies to amplify the new narrative and strategies to move hearts and minds within strategic demographics. • Training: Fostering understanding and building capacity with media companies, philanthropic institutions, academic institutions, and government about contemporary Native experiences through educational workshops, meetings and trainings. Advocating with – and on behalf of – Native talent for greater representation and accurate portrayals in the entertainment industry, media and K-12 education; Connecting and supporting Native young people and Native talent (e.g., writers, producers, directors, actors, etc.) with specific opportunities in the entertainment industry as well as building relationships and networks with allies and influencers to create opportunities for narrative change and impact.

RADM Chris Buchanan, Acting Deputy Director for Field Operations

The Indian Health Service (IHS), an agency within the Department of Health and Human Services, is responsible for providing federal health services to American Indians and Alaska Natives. The provision of health services to members of federally-recognized tribes grew out of the special government-to-government relationship between the federal government and Indian Tribes. This relationship, established in 1787, is based on Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution, and has been given form and substance by numerous treaties, laws, Supreme Court decisions, and Executive Orders. The IHS is the principal federal health care provider and health advocate for Indian people, and its goal is to raise their health status to the highest possible level. The IHS provides a comprehensive health service delivery system for American Indians and Alaska Natives. Mission: To raise the physical, mental, social, and spiritual health of American Indians and Alaska Natives to the highest level. Goal: To ensure that comprehensive, culturally acceptable personal and public health services are available and accessible to American Indian and Alaska Native people. Foundation: To uphold the Federal Government's obligation to promote healthy American Indian and Alaska Native people, communities, and cultures and to honor and protect the inherent sovereign rights of Tribes. IHS priorities focus on People, Partnerships, Quality and Resources. Programs: Provides a full range of curative, preventive, and rehabilitative services for approximately 2.5 million eligible American Indians and Alaskan Natives. Publication: Trends in Indian Health, annual. Established 1955. See IHS section for names & locations of facilities.

The Tribal Law & Order Act (TLOA), signed into law by President Obama, makes federal agencies more accountable for servicing Indian land. TLOA also provides greater freedom for tribes to design and run their own criminal justice systems. TLOA created the Indian Law & Order Commission, an independent, all-volunteer advisory group, to help with securing equal justice for Native Americans living and working on Indian lands. The purpose of this website is to provide updates, news, and resources related to the Commission's activities. The Commission wrote and published its final report and recommendations to the President and Congress of the U.S. in a report entitled, "A Roadmap for Making Native America Safer," reflects comprehensive assessments of criminal justice systems servicing Native American and Alaska Native communities.

The Indian Law Resource Center seeks to overcome the grave problems that threaten Native peoples by advancing the rule of law, by establishing national and international legal standards that preserve their human rights and dignity, and by challenging the governments of the world to accord justice and equality before the law to all indigenous peoples of the Americas. The Indian Law Resource Center is a non-profit law and advocacy organization established and directed by American Indians. We provide legal assistance to Indian and Alaska Native nations who are working to protect their lands, resources, human rights, environment and cultural heritage. Our principal goal is the preservation and wellbeing of Indian and other Native nations and tribes. Activities: Engages in human rights advocacy on behalf of Indians at U.N.; and offers free legal help to tribes. Publications: Handbooks for Conservationists; Indian Rights-Human Rights (handbook); Indigenous Notes (e-newsletter); annual report, articles & reprints. The Institute provides vital language related service to Native communities so that their individual identities, traditional wisdom, and values are passed on to future generations in their original languages. ILI was founded as the Institute for the Preservation of the Original Languages of the Americas (IPLA) by Joanna Hess in September 1992 in Santa Fe, New Mexico. In 1997, the organization became a national center to serve all tribes and individuals working to revitalize indigenous languages in the Americas. In 2000, IPLA was changed to Indigenous Language Institute (ILI) to reflect new Board leadership, expanded services to all indigenous communities, and working relations with indigenous communities internationally. The Indigenous Language Institute (ILI) convened 30 language revitalization experts from various tribes and organizations in February 1997. At that meeting, the participants agreed to the need of a national center to help connect those who are working on language preservation and revitalization. The participants developed the guidelines and a "wish list" of what this national center would provide for Indian Country, and they mandated ILI to find the funding to make this plan a reality. Since that time, ILI has incrementally built upon this plan. Serves American Indians, Alaska Natives, Native Hawaiians, First Nations of Canada, and reaching out to the international indigenous community. ILI provides the tools and training to help Native language teachers and learners help themselves in their efforts to bring language back into everyday lives of the People. The network of people and organizations developed through coming together at annual symposium, ILI seminars and workshops become continuing relationships for sharing experiences and knowledge with each other. ILI also builds partnerships with other organizations that have parallel and converging missions. Publication: Native Language Resource Directory

 Since its founding in 1991, the Indigenous Research Center of the Americas (IRCA) has served as a forum for sharing knowledge and reflections on indigenous cultures and the inherent de-colonial struggles for higher levels of autonomy, sovereignty, and self-determination in Native nations across the hemisphere. IRCA is in the process of developing new projects that leverage digital tools to connect more allies, scholars and scientists with indigenous communities throughout the Americas and to share expertise in the protocols and ethics of engagement with native peoples to enhance multidisciplinary collaborations in the university setting as well as in community led projects outside of the university. As a Native American Studies (NAS) department-affiliated institute, the center is dedicated to enriching the hemispheric focus of the department (via visiting scholars, student scholarships, field schools, colloquia, etc.). IRCA serves as a virtual and physical nexus through which communities, NGOs, social movements, tribal governments can connect with scholars, find support for resistance and revitalization movements, and open new dialogues across disciplinary, cultural and geographic boundaries. Vision: IRCA will maintain and improve upon its original mission with an initial focus on creating mechanisms for the repatriation and dissemination of research to indigenous communities, scholars, and leaders through its Cultural Resource Libraries project. New technology and social media will also be harnessed to continue to foster collaborations with community-driven research and reciprocal processes of experiential learning and engaged pedagogy. Since its founding in 1991, IRCA has served as a forum for sharing knowledge and reflections on indigenous culture and the inherent de-colonial struggles for higher levels of autonomy, sovereignty, & self-determination in Native nations across the hemisphere. IRCA is in the process of developing new projects that leverage digital tools to connect more allies, scholars and scientists with indigenous communities throughout the Americas and to sensitize them to the protocols and ethics of engagement with native peoples. As a Native American Studies (NAS) department-affiliated institute, the center is dedicated to enriching the hemispheric focus of the department (via visiting scholars, student scholarships, field schools, colloquia, etc.). IRCA serves as a virtual and physical nexus through which communities, NGOs, social movements, tribal governments can connect with scholars, find support for resistance and revitalization movements, and open new dialogues across disciplinary, cultural and geographic boundaries. *Cultural Resource Libraries. The Institute is a division of AIRC, Inc., supports the elimination of domestic and sexual violence in Indian communities by providing training and technical assistance addressing safety, confidentiality and social change in tribal and rural communities where there are few or no resources for victims. The Institute's training and technical assistance builds and assesses organizational and community capacity, increases understanding of domestic and sexual violence victim issues, and trains advocate staff to promote the work of tribal communities to reduce and eliminate violence. The Institute produced a series of on-line training modules for victim advocates working in Indian Country. This project provides on-line skills-based training for any tribal victim advocate seeking to improve their basic skill level or gain a refresher course without the cost of travel to a conference. The project, called Advocacy On-line Training (AOT), is funded by the Office on Violence Against Women, under the U.S. Department of Justice and is offered at no cost for grantee staff and advocates. A second project, Tribal Response and Court Enhancement Strategies (TRACES), funded by the Bureau of Justice Assistance, also features a series of on-line training modules for tribal court judges and personnel. Both programs feature modules that focus on cultural and other issues persons with special needs may face both as victims of crime and in accessing tribal courts. Native Voices: A series of videos that delivers domestic violence & sexual assault intervention & response training for law enforcement, prosecution, tribal councils, and advocates. Native Voices has modules addressing the special needs of victims in Alaska as well.

Co-Directors Kathryn R.L. Rand (Law) and Steven Andrew Light (Political Science) founded the Institute for the Study of Tribal Gaming Law and Policy at the University of North Dakota in 2002 as the first university-affiliated institute in the U.S. dedicated to the study of Indian gaming. Rand & Light are internationally recognized experts on Indian gaming, having published over 30 journal articles, book chapters, essays, and three books: Indian Gaming Law: Cases and Materials (Carolina Academic Press, 2008), Indian Gaming Law and Policy (Carolina Academic Press, 2006), and Indian Gaming and Tribal Sovereignty: The Casino Compromise (University Press of Kansas, 2005). They have twice testified on Indian gaming regulation before the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs in Washington, D.C., and were featured on C-SPAN's Book TV. They frequently present their research and perspectives on Indian gaming before diverse audiences, including professional and trade groups, tribal and non-tribal civic associations, academic conferences, and university-endowed lectures. Both are members of the International Masters of Gaming Law, and Rand is on the Editorial Board of the Gaming Law Review. Rand and Light write a column, "Indian Gaming Today," that appears regularly in Casino Lawyer magazine; have written for Casino Enterprise Management and Indian Gaming magazines. They blog on Indian gaming and the legal, political, and public policy issues raised by the tribal gaming industry at their website, Indian Gaming Today, atindiangamingnow.com. Activities: The Institute provides legal and policy assistance and analysis to all interested individuals, governments, and organizations, and conducting scholarly and practical research in the area of tribal gaming. The Institute adopts a unique "team-based" interdisciplinary approach to legal and policy analysis of the complicated and highly technical issues related to Indian gaming, including regulation and agency authority, policy and socioeconomic impact analysis, tribal-state compacting, Class II vs. Class III gaming, tribal law and sovereignty, federal Indian law, labor relations, state referenda and voter initiatives, the federal acknowledgment process, land-into-trust applications, and "off-reservation" gaming. The Institute provides legal and policy assistance related to tribal gaming enterprises to all interested governments and organizations, assists tribes with gaming enterprises in pursuing reservation economic development and building strong tribal governments, and contributes to the scholarly and practical research and literature in the area of tribal gaming. The Institute's primary focus is on issues faced by tribes in the Great Plains, including North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Wyoming, and Montana. The institute offers an interdisciplinary perspective on tribal gaming, incorporating law, political science, and public administration. The Native American Law Project - This project, offered some semesters, provides legal assistance to the Spirit Lake Nation of the Fort Totten Indian Reservation. Second and third year law students provide legal services under the supervision of a practicing attorney. The project has also served as the Tribe's Prosecutor for criminal matters.

Dedicated to reversing the slow genocide of the Lakota People and destruction of their culture, the Lakota People's Law Project partners with Native communities to protect sacred lands, safeguard human rights, promote sustainability, reunite indigenous families, and much more. In 2004, a group of grandmothers in Lakota country—an area comprised of nine Indian reservations in North and South Dakota—asked us to investigate and help them prevent South Dakota's Department of Social Services from removing their grandchildren from their families. The investigation uncovered that drugging and routine patterns of physical and mental abuse of Native children in foster care were leading to high levels of youth suicide. These atrocities are in direct violation of the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA), a federal law put into place in 1978. In response, we formed The Lakota People's Law Project (LPLP) to help put a stop to the cycles of injustice leading to the slow genocide of the Lakota. Our first program, the ongoing Lakota Child Rescue Project, launched in 2005 to address the actions we discovered, and to assist in the return of Lakota children to their families, tribes, and communities. This mission has expanded to include the creation of a tribal foster care program funded with direct Title IV-E funds from the federal government, bypassing the state of South Dakota. It was natural for us to expand our mission when the Dakota Access pipeline (DAPL) threatened the Lakota's sacred lands and water. The injustices perpetrated against the Lakota during the peaceful and prayerful resistance to DAPL further demonstrate the government's blatant pattern of contempt and disregard for the Lakota and their sovereignty. We are committed to working with the Lakota toward the revitalization of their people and culture.

Serves the health, safety, security and emergency preparedness needs of Indian Country. The Inter-Tribal Safety Group in Southern California is taking the necessary steps to evolve into a National Association to be known as the, National Indian Casino Safety Association (NICSA). The NICSA had its first board meeting on December 14th at Viejas Resort & Casino in San Diego. In addition the Tribal Gaming Protection Network (TGPN) has entered into a partnership with NICSA, and fully supports this group in the industry in Indian Country. Having a culture of safety begins in changing the mentality of how each of us view safety. It starts with our thoughts, feelings and ends in our actions to make a safe environment for the guests, staff, and tribe. The Commission is an independent federal regulatory agency within the Department of the Interior and is committed to the prompt and efficient regulation of the Indian gaming industry, which spans more than 527 gaming establishments, associated with nearly 244 tribes across 29 states. Congress established the agency through the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act in 1988. The Commission's primary mission is to regulate gaming activities on Indian lands; to ensure that Indian tribes are the primary beneficiaries of gaming revenue; and to assure that gaming is conducted fairly and honestly by both operators and players. To achieve these goals, the Commission provides technical assistance and training to tribes and tribal regulators; conduct audits and background investigations; review and approve Tribal gaming ordinances and when necessary undertakes enforcement actions, including the issuance of violation, assessment of civil fines, and/or issuance of closure orders. The Commission's dedication to compliance with the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act ensures the integrity of the $29.95 billion Indian gaming industry.

Description: A non-profit organization with a mission to serve and support human resources professionals and tribal leaders in Indian Country Human Resources and Organizational Development through educational events, networking and professional certification. Mission: To provide education, networking and resources to human resources professionals across the US. Goals: To expand NNAHRA from an annual conference to a national presence for Human Resources in the community, specifically for tribe policy-making, networking, education and resources. The Advisory Council would assist in the advisement of grant funding opportunities, new educational and program offerings, sponsorships and more. The greater goal is to eventually be at the national table for human resources regulations and law; to grow the organization and have more employees on their team to carry out their mission and connect other Native American organizations to improve human resources development. This will allow them to implement more employment law codes and position HR professionals to understand what it means to be an employment team; on creating cornerstone training sessions, and also opening up opportunities for them to expand into. The association would also like to grow their team and create positions for event planning, grant writing, and policy analysts. Another goal is to develop national chapters across Native American country to strengthen the network and education. Annual Conference in September.

 Regis Pecos (Cochiti), Co-Founder
 Cheryl Demmert Fairbanks (Tlingit/Tsimshian), Senior Policy Advisor,

The NABPI seeks to forge a collaborative pathway to racial equity in New Mexico and across the nation. By working in cooperation with Native American scholars at UNM, graduates of the Pueblo Indian Doctoral Program and tribal elders, the Institute will coordinate research activity across the state to improve public policy decisions at all levels of government through a Native American lens. The Institute will work in cooperation with the Leadership Institute at the Santa Fe Indian School and utilize the resources available at UNM as well as the expertise of the UNM Center for Social Policy and the New Mexico Center on Law and Poverty. It will also engage and mentor young Native American researchers and students in a variety of projects. The Institute will soon develop the initial leadership structure and strategic plan with direction from its Governance Council, which includes representatives from the Pueblos and Tribes of New Mexico, with extensive experience in leadership, law, medicine, behavioral health, education and cultural literacy.

Sundance Institute's commitment to supporting Native American artists is woven throughout our history. Native American filmmakers have long been involved in the Institute, going back to Larry LittleBird (Laguna/ Santo Domingo Pueblo) and Chris SpottedEagle (Houmas Nation) who participated in the first meetings founding Sundance Institute. Following President and Founder Robert Redford's original vision, the Institute has remained committed to supporting the voices of Native American artists. Labs: The Native Program has built and sustained an Indigenous film circle. The cycle of our work begins by scouting for and identifying Native American and Indigenous artists, bringing them through the mechanisms of support at Sundance Institute to get their work made and shown, then bringing the filmmakers and their work back to native lands. The Native Lab Fellowship has been a vital part of supporting Native filmmakers full-circle since 2004. Fellowships: Merata Mita Fellowship; Full Circle Fellowship, W.K. Kellogg Foundation. A new collaboration between Sundance Institute's Indigenous Program and Art House Convergence (AHC), a North American coalition of community-based, mission-driven movie theaters, was announced last night by the Institute's Indigenous Program Director, N. Bird Runningwater (Cheyenne/Mescalero Apache) at the Toronto International Film Festival. The collaboration will bring six Indigenous short films from Sundance Institute Fellows to select AHC theaters in North America during November's annual celebration of National Native American and Alaska Native Heritage Month. EclairPlay will be offering all e-deliveries to any EclairPlay-equipped cinema that orders the series free of charge. Runningwater says, "This endeavor fulfills an important goal of our program, which is the diversity, creativity and immense talent of emerging Indigenous filmmakers while providing entertainment and expanding awareness of Indigenous content for film audiences around the U.S." "Art House Convergence is incredibly excited about this partnership," said Alison Kozberg, managing director, Art House Convergence. "Enhancing public access to important, contemporary work by Indigenous filmmakers is directly aligned with our commitment to supporting purposeful, creative film exhibition. Just as Bird Runningwater's inspiring call to amplify Indigenous voices in our cinemas during a major panel at our 2019 annual conference laid the foundation for this partnership, we know that this program will contribute to ongoing public and curatorial engagement with Indigenous-made films." Since 1990, a Presidential Executive Order has declared November as National Native American and Alaska Native Heritage Month. Organizations across the U.S. observe the month by hosting programs showcase Indigenous histories, arts and cultures.

The institute offers a Federal Indian law course and a host of seminars and conferences, including the Louisiana Rural Economic Development Summit, All Roads Lead to Chaco Canyon, and the Tribal Courts and Tribal Sovereignty Symposium. Furthermore, the Law Center leads the charge as the first and only historically black college and university (HBCU) to have an institute of this magnitude. The Institute was created as a catalyst to raise awareness about Native American tribes and provide an outlet where they can receive educational, advocacy, legal and policy assistance. With the creation of the institute, the Law Center has established partnerships with multiple tribes including the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, Chitimacha Tribe of Louisiana and Tunica-Biloxi Tribe of Louisiana. The NALPI plans to expand with a fully comprehensive tribal law curriculum and continue to build stronger relationships with tribes that translate into more learning & employment opportunities for students. NALPI is the only Indian law program in the Southeastern U.S.

 John Cataldi, Managing Partner

The Fund is a socially responsible community revitalization fund and economic development organization that provides Native American communities with job creation, infrastructure, housing, education and an overall sustainable economy. The NAVF Carbon Program promotes and develops carbon offset projects on tribal lands at no cost to the Tribal Nation. NAVF finances all of the costs of such projects for Native American tribes, and the tribes receive majority of all net proceeds from selling carbon credits that the ARB issues for such projects. NAVF has over 30 years of experience working with Native American and the First Nation Tribes on projects that promote economic development. NAVF works closely with leaders from Native American communities who promote reforestation, conservation, and economic development. The NAVF will provide tribes the education, opportunity, and financing to create, expand, diversify, and sustain a tribal economy. Extending this same model across the 566 federally and 123 state-recognized tribes within the United States, the NAVF will have facilitated a domestic commerce model, which will lay the foundation for global commerce, trade, significant job creation, workforce development, and the rebirth of Native America as a united economic power. NAVF represents a unique opportunity for investors to participate in the development of the economy and infrastructure of tribal nations that have been granted sovereign tax and other benefits by the U.S.

NATIVE CDFI NETWORK - NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF NATIVE COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS (CDFI)

U.S. Department of the Treasury
Community Development Financial Institutions Fund
1500 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW • Washington, DC 20220
Kevin Walker, President & CEO
(202) 653-0300; Jackson Brossy (Navajo-Dine'), Executive Director
Robin Danner (Hawaiian), 2019 Policy Committee Chair
The origin of the Native Initiatives can be traced back to 1994 when Congress mandated, through the CDFI Fund's authorizing statute, a study on the lending and investment practices in Native Communities. The findings revealed that Native American, Native Alaskan, and Native Hawaiian communities face unique challenges to economic growth. These obstacles include heightened barriers to accessing capital and basic financial services, as well as increased difficulty interacting with private and public sector programs. With this in mind, the CDFI Fund created the Native Initiatives to further support the creation and expansion of Native CDFIs. Native CDFIs help Native Communities thrive and grow by increasing their access to credit, capital, and financial services. The Native Initiatives program uses a combination of financial, technical assistance, and training to build the capacity of CDFIs serving Native Communities. Through the Native American CDFI Assistance Program (NACA Program), Financial Assistance awards are made to Native CDFIs. These competitive awards are made in the form of loans, grants, equity investments, deposits, and credit union shares. By multiplying the impact of federal investment, Native CDFIs are able to pursue a variety of goals, from small business creation to affordable housing development, as well as other community development pursuits. Healthy Food Financing Initiative - Financial Assistance awards are also offered for CDFIs that are interested in expanding their healthy food financing activities. NACA Program also provides Technical Assistance grants, offered to Native CDFIs, Certifiable Native CDFIs, and Sponsoring Entities (see eligibility below). Recipients may use Technical Assistance awards to increase their capacity to serve their communities and/or to create, or become Certified CDFIs. By building the capacities of Native CDFIs, these mission-driven organizations can more effectively help create jobs, housing, and community facilities for Native Communities in need.

NYLA is a year-long leadership society program that provides culturally based training, resources, and a community of support; to help young Native leaders create positive change in their communities. NYLA was founded in July 2009 by a core group of Tribal College students and Elders to create a Native-led organization rooted in indigenous approaches to leadership and community building. NYLA by its very creation embodies the values of self-determination for indigenous communities. Founding members chose to create their own space where the needs of their communities could be addressed through culturally relevant, grassroots-driven organizing strategies.

Mission: To defend our people, communities, and nations against negative resource extraction that poisons our people, pollutes our water, destroys our land, contributes to climate change and violates our human rights. Doing this through organizing our communities, making our voice heard, and utilizing a wide variety of tactics is imperative in shifting the political and financial systems that are impacting our communities; to develop Indigenous communities in a regenerative and sustainable manner based on our values and connection to land, culture & identity. We need to meet the needs of the present generation without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs. We are doing this through regenerative community development, renewable energy investments and social enterprise development; to decolonize our minds, communities, and sovereign nations. The decolonization of our communities and people is directly related to our ability to prosper. Through the revitalization of our Indigenous ceremonies, culture, languages and life ways we will continue to strengthen our identity, and break free from the oppressive systems that disconnect us from achieving the healing growth and connection to spirit that is integral for us as Indigenous people.

Mission: To promote Indigenous Foodways Education and facilitate Indigenous Food Access. Founded by James Beard award winners The Sioux Chef, is dedicated to addressing the economic and health crises affecting Native communities by re-establishing Native foodways. We imagine a new North American food system that generates wealth and improves health in Native communities through food-related enterprises. NAtIFS is establishing the Indigenous Food Lab in Minneapolis that will house a professional Indigenous kitchen and training center covering all aspects of food service; research and development; Indigenous food identification, gathering, cultivation, and preparation; and all components of starting and running a successful culinary business based around Native traditions and Indigenous foods. Reclamation of ancestral education is a critical part of reversing the damage of colonialism and forced assimilation, and food is at the heart of this reclamation. NAtIFS will drive sustainable economic empowerment and prosperity into tribal areas through a reimagined North American food system that also addresses the health impacts of injustice.

The mission of the Southwest Women's Law Center is to create the opportunity for women to realize their full economic and personal potential by: eliminating gender bias, discrimination and harassment; lifting women and their families out of poverty; and ensuring that all women have full control over their reproductive lives through access to comprehensive reproductive health services and information. Guiding Principles - The Center seeks unique and creative ideas and collaborations to accomplish our mission, and our advocacy is guided by the following principles: there is a significant relationship between gender bias and discrimination, poverty, and reproductive justice; legal advocacy is necessary to create the systemic changes needed to improve the lives of a large number of women & girls; women of color, including immigrant women, face additional obstacles and discrimination that must be considered in all aspects of our work; our agenda should arise in part from ideas and information received from community-based service providers and advocates who work on behalf of low-income women and girls in New Mexico; and collaborations at the national and local level are essential for identifying and implementing the most effective strategies for fulfilling the Center's mission. Long-Term Goals - All women of childbearing age in New Mexico have access to comprehensive family planning & reproductive health services.

Mission: To elevate the lives, voices and dreams of Indigenous elder women who are working to heal, strengthen and restore the balance of Indigenous communities. An inaugural circle of eight Legacy Leaders will be supported in a three-year commitment with the balanced goal of empowering and impacting individuals to increase both their personal and public sustainability. Legacy Leaders are connected knowers, co-creators empowered to identify their values, inherent purpose, and experiences in self-determined ways for the sake of their people, their communities, and the sustainability of meaning of the worlds they hold up. Circles of Legacy Leaders will be supported with resources so that they may inspire and impact a larger, more public audience across interrelated focus areas: Violence against girls, women and the earth; Leadership of Indigenous girls and women; Indigenous cultural expression;

Healing from historic trauma and oppression, and; Indigenous education. The core intent of this new work is best described in the words of Jennifer Buffett, NoVo Foundation co-President: "... so that what lives deep within our Indigenous girls and women and Mother Earth can connect and come forth now in these extremely critical times..."

Lori Jump (Sault Ste. Marie Chippewa), Assistant Director
Mallory Black (Navajo-Dine'), Communications Manager

The story of the StrongHearts Native Helpline began in 2012 when the National Indigenous Women's Resource Center (NIWRC) and the National Domestic Violence Hotline (The Hotline) began discussing the need for a domestic violence hotline to support tribal communities across the United States. With input from tribal leaders, a Native women's council, domestic violence experts, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Program, the two organizations began laying the groundwork to develop a Native-centered hotline staffed by advocates with a strong understanding of Native cultures, as well as issues of tribal sovereignty and law. Their vision became a reality with the creation of the StrongHearts Native Helpline (StrongHearts) in March 2017, made possible by support from the Administration on Children, Youth and Families, Family and Youth Services Bureau, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and Verizon. StrongHearts is a culturally-appropriate, anonymous, confidential service dedicated to serving Native American survivors of domestic violence and concerned family members and friends. By dialing 1-844-7NATIVE (1-844-762-8483) Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. CST, callers can connect at no cost one-on-one with knowledgeable StrongHearts advocates who can provide lifesaving tools and immediate support to enable survivors to find safety & live lives free of abuse.

E-mail: Stacey.ecoffey@hhs.gov

Serves as SAMHSA's primary point of contact for tribal governments, tribal organizations, federal departments and agencies, and other governments and organizations on behavioral health issues facing American Indians and Alaska Natives. OTAP brings together SAMHSA's tribal affairs, tribal policy, tribal consultation, tribal advisory, and Tribal Law and Order Act responsibilities to improve agency coordination and meaningful progress. The Office of Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse \(OIASA\) is an organizational component of OTAP. Under TLOA guidelines, OIASA coordinates federal partners and provides tribes with technical assistance and resources to develop and enhance prevention and treatment programs for substance use disorders, including the misuse of alcohol. SAMHSA Tribal Training and Technical Assistance (TTA) Center The SAMHSA TTA Center uses a culturally relevant, evidence-based, holistic approach to support Native communities in their self-determination efforts through infrastructure development and capacity building, program planning, and implementation. The Tribal TTA Center provides training and technical assistance on mental and/or substance use disorders, suicide prevention, and mental health promotion. Find more information on the Tribal TTA Center. SAMHSA Technology Transfer Centers (TTCs) In 2018, SAMHSA established new Technology Transfer Center Networks (TTCs) focusing on addiction, prevention and treatment that address substance use disorders and serious mental illness. The purpose of the TTCs is to develop and strengthen the specialized behavioral healthcare and primary healthcare workforce that provides substance use disorder and mental health prevention, treatment and recovery support services. The TTC Network is comprised of the Addiction Technology Transfer Centers (ATTC), the Mental Health Technology Transfer Centers (MHTTC) and the Prevention Technology Transfer Centers (PTTC). Each TTC includes dedicated Centers that focuses on improving service delivery to American Indian Alaska Native populations. National American Indian/Alaska Native Addiction Technology Transfer Center SAMHSA's American Indian and Alaska Native Addiction Technology Transfer Center (AI/AN ATTC) continues to develop and strengthen the specialized behavioral healthcare and primary healthcare workforce that provides substance use disorder (SUD) treatment and recovery support services to tribal communities. In response to SAMHSA announcing the Tribal Opioid Response (TOR) awards, the AI/AN ATTC developed a webinar series that provides technical assistance to TOR grantees on developing successful strategic plans to address the opioid crisis in their communities. In addition, the AI/AN ATTC began a webinar series focused on building essential substance abuse skills for practitioners to improve the quality of service delivery to tribal communities. The topics range from addiction counseling competencies, principles of drug effective treatment, and professional and ethical responsibilities. Find more information on ATTC. National American Indian and Alaska Native Mental Health Technology Transfer Center The National American Indian and Alaska Native Mental Health Technology Transfer Center (AI/AN MHTTC) works with treatment practitioners to improve the delivery of mental health services to AI/AN individuals, families, and tribal and urban Indian communities. The AI/AN MHTTC aims to strengthen their capacity to deliver effective evidence based practices, including the full continuum of services spanning mental illness prevention, treatment, and recovery support. Among many services, the AI/AN MHTTC provides education and training for certification exams and clinical supervision opportunities for mental health professionals, a Native American Leadership Academy to enhance leadership skills in mental health promotion, treatment, and recovery, and technical assistance for Tribal Action Planning. Find more information on MHTTC. National American Indian and Alaska Native Prevention Technology Transfer Center The National American Indian and Alaska Native Prevention Technology Transfer Center (AI/AN PTTC) is a newly launched SAMHSA program that will develop and disseminate tools and strategies needed to improve the quality of substance abuse prevention efforts. The AI/AN PTTC will provide training and technical assistance to national substance use disorder prevention professionals in order to improve their understanding of prevention science, how to use epidemiological data to guide prevention planning, and selection and implementation of evidence-based and promising prevention practices in tribal communities.

Sundance Institute's commitment to supporting Native American artists is woven throughout our history. Native American filmmakers have long been involved in the Institute, going back to Larry LittleBird (Taos Pueblo) and Chris SpottedEagle (Houmas Nation) who participated in the first meetings founding Sundance Institute. Following President and Founder Robert Redford's original vision, the Institute has remained committed to supporting the voices of Native American artists. The Indigenous Program champions Indigenous independent storytelling artists through residency Labs, Fellowships, public programming, and a year-round continuum of creative, financial, and tactical support. The Program conducts outreach and education to identify a new generation of Indigenous voices, connecting them with opportunities to develop their storytelling projects, and bringing them and their work back to Indigenous lands. At its core, the Program seeks to inspire self-determination among Indigenous filmmakers and communities by centering Indigenous people in telling their own stories. The program is currently seeking US-based Native American, Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian filmmakers with short film screenplays that are no longer than 15 pages to consider for this Fellowship. The writer/director is encouraged to have a producer prior to selection. The writer/director will be the recipient of travel and accommodations to participate in the Residential Lab, a three-stage grant contract providing funds supporting pre-production, production and post-production, and attendance at the 2019 Sundance Film Festival. Four projects are selected annually for the Fellowship from a national competition. The Festival hosts the annual "Native Forum" – a hub for the international indigenous film community, and a program of panel discussions, filmmaking discussions, and networking events that provide opportunities for Indigenous filmmakers.

The Tribal Alliance of Sovereign Indian Nations (TASIN) is an intergovernmental association of federally recognized tribal governments throughout Southern California. We are the descendants of Native Americans who have called California home for thousands of years. We are tribal governments - building schools, roads, water systems, health centers, and providing other vital services to our citizens. We are partners with our neighboring cities and counties. We are part of California - both its past and its future. Our mission is to protect & promote the tribal sovereign government rights, the cultural identity and interests of federally recognized tribes located within the Federal Central Judicial District within the State of California.

TIGA Treaty Council Representatives:
Jerome "Brooks" BigJohn, Duane Chapman, Bill Guelcher
Description: An alliance of Indian tribes working collectively to bring Internet gaming to Indian country. Developed an intertribal treaty to serve as the TIGA charter. Purpose: To organize tribes across the country to both offer and regulate Internet & mobile phone gaming. Until laws change, TIGA will accept real-money wagers only from people who are physically present in the member tribes' jurisdictions, such as patrons at tribal casinos and visitors to other tribal lands. When customers are outside of tribal jurisdiction, the games will be fun-play and will offer casino promotions. Games will be those categorized as Class II under IGRA, such as slot-like bingo, traditional bingo, pull tabs and poker. Because the games are Class II, no tribal-state compacts will have to be amended. Using this strategy, TIGA tribes will jump ahead of the online competition and get extremely valuable experience with real-money wagering before other tribes and gaming operations. The idea for TIGA began among tribes in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan. TIGA developments are now being followed by 28 tribes in 13 states.

Description: An Indian-owned and operated non-profit corporation organized to design and develop education, research, training, and technical assistance programs which promote the enhancement of justice in Indian country, and the health & well-being and culture of Native people. Dedicated to providing free publication resources, comprehensive training, and technical assistance for Native nations and tribal justice systems in pursuit of our vision to empower Native communities to create and control their own institutions for the benefit of all community members, now, and for future generations. Projects: Tribal Law Clearinghouse. While TSPI serves as the umbrella organization for numerous projects, one of our largest projects is the Capacity Building Center for Tribes. This project builds on the experience from TSPI's previous child welfare technical assistance center, the National Resource Center for Tribes, a project that concluded after a 5-year grant period. A new system – the Capacity Building Collaborative – was established in October 2014 and is comprised of: The Center for States, Center for Tribes, and Center for Courts. Instead of managing the Center for Tribes, TSPI is now a major partner and subcontractor with the University of Denver which holds the Center's cooperative agreement. TSPI and the Center for Tribes project team provides the direct capacity building services with tribal child welfare systems, coordinates guidance from a national advisory committee and support of a national pool of child welfare consultants. Publications. Established 1996.

The National Association of Tribal Historic Preservation Officers (NATHPO) is the sponsoring organization of the Tribal Museums and Cultural Centers website. For the past 10 years, NATHPO has served Indian country as the only national organization dedicated to providing support and training for Tribal government officials in the museum field, as well as cultural preservation. We have a proven track record of conducting regional and national meetings and specialized training. Our primary constituency is the over 560 American Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments located throughout the nation, specifically, the Tribal Historic Preservation Officers and individual tribal museums, libraries and archives. Tribally operated museums have the mission of preserving, perpetuating, and revitalizing the cultural and historic heritage of native peoples. Museum professionals must have substantial knowledge and high levels of expertise to enable tribal museums to play their essential role in the transmitting of native culture from one generation to the next and in the education of the American public. NATHPO created the National Native Museum Training Program to benefit tribal museums and the people they serve based on a demonstrated need.

U.S. INDIGENOUS DATA SOVEREIGNTY NETWORK (USIDSN)

Website: www.usindigenousdata.org

The (USIDSN) helps ensure that data for and about Indigenous nations and peoples in the US (American Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians) are utilized to advance Indigenous aspirations for collective and individual wellbeing.[1] USIDSN's primary function is to provide research information and policy advocacy to safeguard the rights and promote the interests of Indigenous nations and peoples in relation to data. Indigenous data sovereignty is the right of a nation to govern the collection, ownership, and application of its own data. It derives from tribes' inherent right to govern their peoples, lands, and resources. This conception of data sovereignty positions Indigenous nations' activities to govern data within an Indigenous rights framework. In other words, Indigenous data sovereignty accords with international declarations and covenants to which the US has become a signatory, such as the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (UNDRIP). Notably, this conception of data sovereignty contrasts with the mainstream understanding of data sovereignty, which is that data are subject to the laws of the nation in which it is stored. When data are collected from the people and communities of an Indigenous nation, the data come under the control of that Indigenous nation. The US Indigenous Data Sovereignty Network unites advocates for Indigenous data sovereignty at the tribal, state, national, and international levels. Network membership is open to all American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian data users, tribal leaders, information and communication technology providers, researchers, policymakers and planners, businesses, service providers, and community advocates. Newsletters from Norm DeWeaver on American Indian and Alaska Native issues in Census Bureau operations and data. Comments, questions, and suggestions on the newsletter are always welcome. The newsletter continues to be interested in hearing from tribes and Native organizations, all across the country, on your promotional efforts for the 2020 decennial census and would like to feature them in future issues. You may also join the email distribution lists for this newsletter. For either inquiry, contact Norm DeWeaver by e-mail at norm\_deweaver@rocketmail.com

Martha C. Williams, Commission Chairperson
Eloise Josey, Executive Director; E-mail: aiac@att.net

Purpose: To serve as a liaison agency between Alabama's seven state-recognized tribes (one of which is federally recognized), Indian individuals and the various levels of government & private sector entities. Recognizing the unique cultural and sociological needs of Alabama's "invisible minority", the Legislature specifically charged AIAC to "deal fairly & effectively with Indian affairs; to bring local, state, federal resources into focus...for Indian citizens of the State of Alabama; to provide aid...assist Indian Communities...promote recognition of the right of Indians to pursue cultural and religious traditions..." Noting that charge for action, AIAC is placed in a liaison/advocacy role between the various departments of governments and the Indian people of our tribal communities. AIAC stands alone to represent the Indian people of Alabama who wish to stand together with their fellow citizens while maintaining their own cultural and ethnic heritage. Activities: Sponsors an annual statewide powwow to raise money for the Alabama Indian Children's Scholarship Fund. Also, speaking engagements, presentations, workshops and seminars for schools, churches, military, governmental agencies, etc. regarding Alabama Indians. Publications: Annual Report; newsletters. ALSC was established in 1967 as a private, nonprofit law firm. ALSC offers free civil legal services to low income and disadvantaged people to protect their safety, their health, and promote family stability. We are dedicated to bridging the statewide gap between those who need civil legal help and those who are able to get it. We have an unwavering and longstanding commitment to assuring that Alaska's rural communities have access to the justice system. Through advocacy, education, collaboration and litigation ALSC empowers individuals, protects fundamental rights, strengthens communities, creates opportunities, and achieves justice. In an average year, ALSC helps over 7,000 low-income Alaskans address civil legal problems. These issues are affecting their families, homes, incomes, jobs and access to vital services such as health care and utilities. Legal guidance is provided by staff attorneys and pro bono volunteer lawyers who donate their time and services to further our efforts. Our legal experts publish information on a variety of issues, offer community legal education, and refer clients to other social services as needed.

 The Alaska Tribal Health System (ATHS) is a diverse and multifaceted healthcare system that has developed over the last 30 years. It represents the diversity of Alaska Native people. Alaska has 229 federally recognized tribes that live across 586,412 square miles of predominantly road-less land, the underlying reason for the creation of this innovative and essential statewide health system. Tribal health organizations in most areas are the only healthcare providers available, and therefore serve everyone in the area regardless of race. In 2000, the ATHS served 119,241 Alaska Natives, 19 percent of the state's population. At that time, 178 village clinics employed 468 community health aide/practitioners, although there were 32 practitioner vacancies. Alaska is the only state in which over 99 percent of health programs are managed by tribes and Native organizations.

Board of Directors: Carolyn Lennie (Gwich'in/Inuvialuit)

Elizabeth Vittekwa (Teet'it Gwich'in); Lorraine Netro (Vuntut Gwich'in)

James Nathaniel, Jr. (Draanjik Gwich'in)

The Steering Committee was formed in 1988 in response to proposals to drill for oil in the "Sacred Place Where Life Begins," the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. Our elders recognized that oil development in caribou calving grounds was a threat to the very heart of our people. They called upon the chiefs of all Gwich'in villages from Canada to Alaska to come together for a traditional gathering – the first in more than a century. At the gathering in Arctic Village, we addressed the issue with a talking stick in accordance with our traditional way, and decided unanimously that we would speak with one voice against oil and gas development in the birthing and nursing grounds of the Porcupine Caribou Herd. Our unified voice is expressed in a formal resolution, Gwich'in Niintsyaa. Often, the Steering Committee has presented testimony in front of the US Congress, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Indigenous Peoples, and public hearings. Without this testimony many would not know that this is a Human Rights issue to the Gwich'in.

Founded in 2006 by five tribes from across Arizona. These tribes regularly engaged in dialogue surrounding actions taken by the U.S. Department of Energy and the State of Arizona that affected tribal energy interests, even as retail consumers. The tribes considered the creation of their own named group to be a vehicle for better recognition in those forums. Current members include: Ak-Chin Energy Services; Gila River Indian Community Utility Authority; Tohono O'odham utility Authority; and Aha Macav Power Service.

The Director of Indian Education serves as a liaison between the tribal education departments and the ADE, works via partnerships with outside agencies to provide resources for Native American students, and facilitates the Superintendent's initiatives to benefit the academic achievement and cultural awareness of Arizona's indigenous youth. Superintendent of Public Instruction and the Arizona Department of Education are committed to providing the highest quality education to Arizona's 60,000 American Indian students in the Arizona public/charter school system. The ADE Indian Education office is in the Special Projects Division in the Arizona Department of Education. Our mission is to promote leadership, education and training to schools, agencies and governments that are responsible for the quality of education of Arizona's American Indian children. The Indian Education program administers federal grants, including the Johnson-O'Malley Program, to meet the educational and cultural needs of participating LEAs and implements A.R.S. 15-244, Indian Education Act. Outreach is provided to all of Arizona's local educational agencies on reservations and urban areas with high populations of American Indian students. Technical assistance is provided in collaboration with all units at ADE that interface with these LEAs. Conferences and training, as well as parental involvement activities, are also provided on-site and at ADE.

Ian Skorodin (Choctaw), Executive Director.

The LA Skins Fest, an annual Native American film festival taking place in December. Its a Native American arts initiative that offers an annual film festival now entering its thirteenth year, a concert that showcases contemporary Native musicians and year round development opportunities for emerging Native American actors, writers, and directors. The LA Skins Fest is a project of the Barcid Foundation; a non-profit organization that focuses on multimedia programming in indigenous communities. A new "Native American Animation Lab" is an intensive workshop that develops Native Americans with a current animation project, lab is designed to offer new access for Native Americans interested in breaking into animation. Ian stated, "We have a talented community in need of exposure, access, and opportunity. This new endeavor will get more Native American voices in front of the right people who can develop their animation projects and build their animation careers." Stated The LA SKINS FEST will invite seven promising Native Americans to a multi-day, animation workshop in Los Angeles, CA in early December. All participants chosen for the lab will workshop one animation project through one-on-one mentoring, group sessions and peer workshops. The program will conclude with an intensive pitching session for each participant. The purpose of the lab is to further develop the skills of the writers and prepare them for employment in the industry. This is an in-depth workshop for Native Americans who have a script, a treatment, an original comic book, or visual materials they want to develop into an animated television series or feature film. The Native American Animation Lab was created in accordance with the LA Skins Fest's mission to improve media portrayals of Native Americans and to increase the number of Native Americans employed in all facets of the media industry. The NATIVE AMERICAN ANIMATION LAB deadline to apply is October 1st, 2019 and late deadline November 1st, 2019. For more information and to submit please visit <http://www.laskinsfest.com>. The Native American Animation Lab is supported by COMCAST NBCUniversal, The Walt Disney Studios and Cartoon Network Studios.

Founded to research, document and preserve the history and culture of the Nevada City Rancheria Nisenan Tribe. This non-profit is guided by the Nevada City Rancheria Tribal Council. Over the years, the organization has grown in focus and capacity to better serve the Tribe's goals and needs. Because the Nevada City Rancheria is no longer recognized by the United States, Tribal members are denied access to the federal Indian programs created to support their health, education, housing and economic stability. With financial and community support, CHIRP seeks to "creatively mimic" programs that will support the preservation, protection and perpetuation of the Nisenan people and their culture into the future, while advocating for the restoration of the Nevada City Rancheria's federal recognition.

The Association is an urban-based, non-profit organization dedicated to transforming American Indian communities through developing and delivering American Indian education and advocacy as an experience founded in Native American culture, language, and history, fused with traditional knowledge and tribal values designed as a model to enhance all urban/off reservation Native communities. Programs include the Medicine Shield Indian School and University Support Program, the Chicago American Indian Museum and Black Hawk Dance Troupe, and the Urban American Indian Institute. Publication: Native Urban Visions News. Mission: To encourage advocacy, research and communication about the many issues facing urban American Indian people across the country today. While thousands of American Indian people have called Chicago and other cities home and a place to work, raise children, worship, and attend school, life for those families from all of the tribes throughout America has not been easy. Little is known about the struggles they face, the hardships they endure, and the survival and triumphs they have secured. Public education, higher education, early childhood education, public health, American Indian health services, employment and employment assistance, housing, discrimination, civil rights, economic development, media relations, leadership, mental health, social services, elder services, transportation, dental care, legal services, police brutality, juvenile justice, child abuse, substance abuse, family violence - these are some of the areas that need advocacy, research and development within urban native communities. American Indian people continue to be the poorest in America and the challenges of urban life continue to contribute to that poverty. Most American Indian tribal members (70%) live in urban communities and yet less than 1% of all American Indian targeted funding finds its way to those communities. In 2010, the University of Chicago's Urban American Indian Families Conference was shaped by Dr. Dorene Wiese, Francie Corry, and Andrew Begay, with the assistance of Dr. Penny Johnson and Julie Jung to address some of these concerns. In 2016, Northwestern University hosted the first Urban American Indian Education conference in the country. Established 2016.

There are approximately 60,000 Native Americans in Michigan, the tenth largest population of Native Americans in the United States. The tribes of Michigan constitute three major ethnologically distinct groups: the Ottawa, Chippewa, and Potawatomi. Currently, there are twelve Indian tribes in Michigan with whom the federal government acknowledges a political relationship. In addition, there are several tribes in Michigan whose political status has been ignored by the federal government. Michigan's Indian population also includes members of nearly every tribe in the Nation, as well as many Canadian-born Native Americans.

The Lakota People's Law Project is committed to protecting the First Amendment rights of Native peoples and their allies. LPLP aims to assist in the reclamation of Indigenous lands and to stop all threats to the Lakota culture. We understand that Native peoples possess inherent sovereignty and the right to autonomous rule and self-determination. The Project is committed to working with the Lakota toward the revitalization of their people and culture. Programs: Lakota Child Rescue Project, launched in 2005 to assist the return of Lakota children to their families, tribes, and communities. In 2016, the Dakota Access pipeline (DAPL) threatened the Lakota's sacred lands and water, so we expanded our mission. The injustices perpetrated against the Lakota during the peaceful and prayerful resistance to DAPL highlighted a blatant pattern of contempt and disregard for the Lakota and their sovereignty. In 2017, in the wake of the Standing Rock protests, we undertook the successful defense of Lakota water protector and LPLP attorney Chase Iron Eyes, who had been arrested for allegedly trespassing on his tribe's own ancestral lands and instigating a "riot." The term "riot" is now key to an ongoing attack on American civil liberties. States around the nation are passing laws meant to chill and criminalize the protest of pipelines, which constantly ignore treaty boundaries and have the potential to despoil sacred lands. Learn more about our campaigns and discover how you can get involved!

The Indian affairs commission may assist and mobilize the support of state and federal agencies in assisting Indian individuals and groups in North Dakota, especially the five tribal councils, as the Indian individuals and tribal councils seek to develop their own goals, project plans for achieving those goals, and implement those plans. The commission's duties are to: Investigate any phase of Indian affairs and to assemble and make available the facts needed by tribal, state, and federal agencies to work effectively together; Assist tribal, state, and federal agencies in developing programs whereby Indian citizens may achieve more adequate standards of living; Assist tribal groups in developing increasingly effective institutions of self-government; Work for greater understanding and improved relationships between Indians and non-Indians; Seek increased participation by Indian citizens in local & state affairs; Confer with and coordinate officials and agencies of other governmental units and congressional committees with regard to Indian needs and goals; Encourage and propose agreements and accords between federal, state, and local agencies and the several tribal governments, to assist in monitoring and negotiating agreements and accords when asked by an affected tribe. The commission consists of the governor, three members appointed by the governor from the state at large, two of whom must be of Indian descent, must be enrolled members of a tribe, and must be current voting residents of the state, and the chairperson, or the chairperson's designee, of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe; the Spirit Lake Nation; the Three Affiliated Tribes of the Fort Berthold Reservation; the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa Indians; and the Sisseton-Wahpeton Oyate of the Lake Traverse Reservation. The governor is the chairperson of the commission. The commission shall meet quarterly or as otherwise agreed. Members of the commission or the chairperson's designee are entitled to receive mileage and expenses for attending each meeting as are allowed other state officers. Purpose: A liaison/referral agency established to facilitate tribal/state relations. Programs: Indian Education; Indian Youth Alcohol and Other Drug Prevention Programs. Publications: Update, quarterly newsletter; Directory of Statewide Indian Programs. SPRC was founded in 2007 by a group of long-term residents of the Bismarck-Mandan area who are committed to the mission of maintaining a home-away-from-home for off-reservation American Indians living in the area. The founders realized the need for an organization to assist Native people and families who are living away from their homelands, while respecting the sovereign nature of their individual Tribal citizenship. Mission: Addresses the social/cultural, emotional, mental, spiritual, and physical needs of Native people of all Tribes living in the Bismarck-Mandan area; Fosters strong, self-sufficient individuals and families; Provides a bridge between Native and non-Native people to foster a cohesive community. SPRC seeks to enhance existing services by providing critical data, outreach and cultural brokering needs, rather than replicating or competing for existing services. Through the use of quantitative and qualitative data, SPRC addresses service gaps which may be met by partnering with organizations already providing similar services, and by seeking funding to fulfill gaps in services.

The first Court of Indian Offenses in the area that was to become the State of Oklahoma was originally established prior to statehood in the Indian Territory in 1886. The original Court of Indian Offenses was created to provide law enforcement for the Kiowa, Comanche, and Apache (KCA) reservation. Several prominent tribal leaders served as judges of the court including Quanah Parker (Comanche), Lone Wolf (Kiowa) and several others. An Indian police force provided the law enforcement for the KCA, Cheyenne-Arapaho, and other reservations.

OFFICE OF TRIBAL AFFAIRS

500 Summer St. NE E-15 • SALEM, OR 97301
(503) 945-5600 Fax 581-6198

Adam Becenti (Dine'), Director of the Office of Tribal Affairs
Christine Kamps & Emly Hawkins, ICWA Consultants
In 1997, DHS established a Tribal relations liaison position within the Directors Office. Duties include coordinating the Public Health Division meetings and working with Tribes to solve specific problems that arise. The liaison also trains DHS staff and partners on the relationship between the department and Tribes. The Department has also appointed special Tribal liaisons that represent all main areas of DHS programs: child welfare, health, self-sufficiency, vocational rehabilitation, senior and disability services. Currently, DHS interacts with Oregon Tribes on services that include health care, alcohol and drug treatment programs, mental health services, employment and training, services to people with disabilities, senior programs, public health and child welfare. Two of these areas are of particular concern both to tribes and the department: health care and child protective services. Indian Tribes provide health-care services to their Tribal members through clinics that the Tribes operate in their communities. These facilities receive funds from tribal, federal and state sources. The DHS Office of Medical Assistance Programs (OMAP) works closely with the Tribal clinics to ensure that Oregon Health Plan coverage is extended to those who qualify. The treatment of Indian children in the child-protective field is another area of attention for the tribes. In 1978, the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) became law. Among its provisions, the law requires that Tribes be allowed to become a party in child welfare cases in state courts, when the case involves Indian children who have been removed from their home by a government agency. Established 1997.

Description: Located on the Oglala Lakota Pine Ridge Reservation, Cangleske, Inc. is a nationally recognized organization, providing domestic violence and sexual assault prevention/intervention services and facilitates the coordinated response to domestic violence and sexual assault. Sacred Circle aids tribes and tribal organizations to stop violence against Native women. It addresses violence against Native women in the context of the unique historical, jurisdictional, and cultural issues that American Indian/Alaska Native Nations face. It provides the focal point to establish a multi-faceted systemic response to facilitate non-violence in American Indian/Alaska Native communities, and to establish a domestic violence and sexual assault agenda for American Indian/Alaska Native tribes and tribal agencies. It also provides access to culturally specific information, materials, and specialized training institutes. The primary audience of Sacred Circle includes more than 500 federally recognized American Indian/Alaska native nations in the United States. Its focus is directed toward professional providers serving these communities, including tribal law enforcement personnel (judges, prosecutors and court workers), probation officers, shelter advocates, and batterer intervention providers. Established 1998.

Activities: Annual Navajo Rug Show & Sale in November.

The Program got its start in the 1980's during the turbulent years of the Hopi-Navajo land dispute that ultimately resulted in 10,000 Navajos being relocated from their traditional homelands. During those times there were many Elders facing severe hardships and deprivations. When Linda Myers became aware of this desperate situation it was food more than anything else that these people needed for their survival. With the assistance of Grace Smith Yellowhammer, Linda began to help. As Linda's solo trips to the reservation with food and clothing gradually evolved over the years into the complex logistical endeavor of today's food runs, food has remained the core focus of how the Program assists the Elders.

Purpose: To provide direct assistance to the tribes in Washington State and across the nation. The Clinic partners with the Tulalip, Squaxin Island, Port Gamble S'Klallam & Puyallup Tribes to serve as their public defender on these reservations. As part of the Native American Law Center at UW School of Law, the Tribal Court Public Defense Clinic partners with the Tulalip Tribes to serve as the primary public defender in criminal cases filed in their Tribal Court. The Tulalip Tribes sought this innovative partnership to address the need for legal representation in 2002 and since then the clinic has become a national model for providing tribal public defense services. The clinic's clients are generally members of federally recognized Tribes who have been charged with crimes by the Tulalip Tribes. Students work primarily on cases filed in Tulalip Tribal Court, under the supervision of clinic faculty. Additionally, the Tribal Court Public Defense Clinic partners with the Muckleshoot Indian Tribe to serve parents in a variety of stages of the Youth in Need of Care process.
