BECCIO, SARAH (Isleta Pueblo) (CEO of Native PR firm)

Education: University of Arizona; University of Maryland, Baltimore County. Affiliation & Address: Co-Creator, Codetalkers, Founder & CEO, IndigeComms, 4801 Fairmont Ave., Bethesda, MD 20814. E-mail: sarah@indigeComms.com. The mission of Sarah's business, IndigeComms, was inspired by a clear need in the Native community. There was a recent incident when a tribe was facing a crisis and needed professional assistance, but found that the PR firms they turned to lacked a clear understanding of sovereignty and the cultural sensitivity to assist the tribe in dealing with mainstream media. That's where she found her niche. Since then, IndigeComms has started assisting professional sports teams on their Native American outreach among other projects, including a budding partnership with Running Start. In addition to her business, Sarah is filling another need in the Native community. Along with her brother, she's recently started a nonprofit organization aimed at Native American youth called Codetalkers. Her mission is to educate and support the next generation of code talkers. Other professional posts: Vice Chair, Junior League of Washington, 2019-present; Board of Directors, Washington Women in Public Relations. Past professional posts: Sarah's first position was at the National Congress of American Indians where she worked as a communications associate. During her time there, she worked with the White House on the Generation Indigenous Initiative and put together the first-ever Tribal Youth Gathering – which she describes as an incredible experience. From there, she moved on to the Department of Interior as a public relations specialist at Indian affairs, then onto the National Indian Gaming Commission as the director of public affairs.

Theresa was appointed by former Governor Bill Richardson in July 2010 to the five-member New Mexico Public Regulation Commission and was elected in November 2010 by the voters of her district to serve a full four-year term. Constituents from Northwest New Mexico once again elected Theresa in November 2018 to serve another term as Commissioner for District 4, of the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission. She is both honored & humbled by the voters' faith in her. Theresa began her career as an intern with the Federal Bureau of Land Management. Beginning in 1989, she worked for former New Mexico Attorney General Tom Udall for nine years, and then for the next eight years served as Congressman Udall's Constituent Services Representative for Tribal Relations. In November 2006, Theresa was appointed as the first Native American Liaison for the five-member Public Regulation Commission. Her experience encompasses critical Tribal issues, and she works tirelessly to promote the general welfare for all citizens. Perhaps most importantly, Theresa is dedicated to bringing to government the qualities of honesty, integrity, ethics, and vision.

Affiliation: CEO/Founder (2011-present), Brave Heart Group LLC, Sacramento, CA. E-mail: info@braveheartgrouppllc.com E-mail: jaybraveheart@gmail.com Past professional posts: Board Member, American Indian Cancer Foundation, 2013-18. The BraveHeart Group improves the business practices of Tribal governments and Tribal casinos by improving their accounting practices, providing forensic accounting services, precisely targeting marketing strategies, lowering insurance rates, and providing a wider variety of financing options. Brave Heart is widely recognized for changing the paradigm for Indian businesses; focusing on empowering Tribes with improved business knowledge, rather than simply obtaining long-term contracts for his own company. He is a first generation Indian entrepreneur, and is a nationally recognized speaker on empowering young native entrepreneurs. After graduating from Little Wound High School on Pine Ridge, Brave Heart joined the United States Marine Corps where he traveled the globe, strengthened his character and determination, and opened his world. Since proudly serving his country, Brave Heart has been engaged in all aspects of business and entrepreneurship. For four years he owned his own successful medical services company. Brave Heart then took the knowledge and experience he acquired running his own company back home to the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation where he served his Tribal nation as small-business success coach. Eventually Brave Heart was recruited to join one of his most successful clients, Native American Natural Foods. At Native American Natural Foods, Brave Heart became one of the most prominent faces and voices behind the marketing success of the traditional native food the "Tanka Bar." Known nationwide in Indian Country as the "Tanka Bar guy," Brave Heart mastered marketing Indian Country businesses. Recognized for his excellence in business and marketing, Brave Heart was recruited to run the marketing department for the Cheyenne Arapaho Tribe's casinos. Working in the heart of Indian Country's strongest economic sector, gaming, Brave Heart identified the glaring need for improved business knowledge and services and founded The BraveHeart Group LLC.

(writer, American Indian journalist)

Specializes in federal Indian law and social justice issues. Suzette has written extensively on children and families for Indian Country Today Media Network. Suzette served as a field producer and writer for the documentary, "A Broken Trust." "A Broken Trust" was the result of an 18-month investigation by Brewer and her colleagues. They discovered severe breakdowns in investigations and prosecutions of sexual assaults in Indian Country. The investigation found: "Through our work on A Broken Trust, it is my profound hope that Congress and the federal agencies will work together to strengthen and enforce the law, and provide more funding for law enforcement, social services and community support to begin addressing this ongoing, pernicious threat to the 574 federally recognized tribes," Brewer said. The Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Awards honor outstanding reporting on issues including human rights, social justice and the power of individual action in the United States and around the world. Past winners include The Washington Post, National Public Radio, CBS's "60 Minutes," ABC's "20/20" and HBO. Newsy was recognized in the domestic television category. "A Broken Trust," reported and produced by Newsy's Maren Machles, Carrie Cochran and Angela Hill, and independent reporter Brewer, originally aired on Newsy's cable channel last fall. E-mail: lbrooks@amherst.edu. Lecturer, English and American Studies, Amherst College, Amherst, MA. Professor Lisa Brooks teaches courses in Native American studies, early American literature and comparative American Studies. She received her Ph.D. in English, with a minor in American Indian Studies, from Cornell University in 2004. Before coming to Amherst, she was John L. Loeb Associate Professor of the Humanities at Harvard University. Her first book, The Common Pot: The Recovery of Native Space in the Northeast (University of Minnesota Press 2008) reframes the historical and literary landscape of the American northeast. Illuminating the role of writing as a tool of community reconstruction and land reclamation in indigenous social networks, The Common Pot constructs a provocative new picture of Native space before and after colonization. The Media Ecology Association honored the book with its Dorothy Lee Award for Outstanding Scholarship in the Ecology of Culture for 2011. Although deeply rooted in her Abenaki homeland, Professor Brooks's work has been widely influential in a global network of scholars. She co-authored the collaborative volume, Reasoning Together: The Native Critics Collective (University of Oklahoma Press 2008), which was recognized by the Native American & Indigenous Studies Association (NAISA) as one of the Ten Most Influential Books in Native American and Indigenous Studies of the First Decade of the Twenty-First Century. She also wrote the "Afterword" for American Indian Literary Nationalism (University of New Mexico Press 2006), which won the Beatrice Medicine Award for Scholarship in American Indian Studies. In 2009, Brooks was elected to the inaugural Council of the Native American and Indigenous Studies Association, and she currently serves on the Editorial Board of Studies in American Indian Literatures. In addition to her scholarly work, Brooks serves on the Advisory Board of Gedakina, a non-profit organization focused on indigenous cultural revitalization, educational outreach, and community wellness in New England. She is currently working on a book project, "Turning the Looking Glass on Captivity and King Philip's War," which places early American texts, including Mary Rowlandson's captivity narrative, within the historical and literary geography of Native space. Awards, honors: Native American and Indigenous Studies Association Prize: Reasoning Together. CASEY, ANDREW M. (Cherokee)
(associate attorney)

Education: University of Oklahoma College of Law, JD, 2015. Affiliation & Address: Associate, Stinnett Law, 404 E. Dewey Ave., Suite 202, Sepulpa, OK 74066 (918) 227-1177. Andrew "Andy" joined Stinnett Law as an Associate Attorney in January 2016. While attending the University of Oklahoma College of Law, he served as the Articles Development Editor for the American Indian Law Review, an officer for the Board of Advocates, and competed in the National NALSA Moot Court Championship. During his 2L year, Andy earned the title of Top Speaker/Best Oral Advocate in the country for the 2014 National NALSA Moot Court Championship. An Oklahoma native, Andy grew up in the Sand Springs/Sapulpa area before graduating from Jenks High School in 2004. In 2009, he graduated with a Bachelors Degree in Political Science from the University of Central Oklahoma. While completing his degree, Andy received several awards as a nationally competitive policy debater including being named an All-American as well as advancing into deep elimination rounds at several national debate tournaments. By nature, Andy is a fierce competitor who never lost the drive to out-research and out-work his opponents; he brings that charisma to all of Stinnett Law's cases. Law was not Andy's first career, he began as a debate coach at the University of North Texas in Denton, TX and Heritage Hall in Oklahoma City. For over four years, Andy specialized in conducting policy and legal research while being able to convey his research to high school and college students. To this day, one of the greatest skills he has honed is the ability to break complex legal theories down into practical and easy-to-understand ideas. As a loving father and a lucky fiance, Andy brings dedication to every client centered around in-depth research and a passion for writing. Awards, honors: Top Speaker/Best Oralist, National Native American Law Student Association, 2014.

Phillip's work will help document these endangered languages and assist in language revitalization efforts at the community level. Languages he is most committed to working with are Nez Perce, Sahaptin, Cayuse, Klamath, Chinook Jargon and other Oregon languages. As part of his language preservation work, Phillip made significant contributions to the Tamastlikt Cultural Institute's sixty exhibit text panels that include historical stories about the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla. His linguistic research has also made valuable insights towards understanding Nez Perce language use and history. Language materials researched as part of the Ecotrust Indigenous Leadership Award fellowship will be deposited at the Tamastlikt Cultural Institute. Phillip is a speaker of Nez Perce and is a Cayuse/Nez Perce tribal member of the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation in Oregon. Phillip has served his Tribal community not only in language preservation but also through his work in fine arts, oral history collection, archaeological field work, conservation and historical research. Ohillip has had over 20 years of experience working in the Native community in the areas of anthropology, repatriation and cultural research. He was a research consultant at the Tamastlikt Cultural Institute and as a Museum Specialist at the Smithsonian Institute's National Museum of Natural History in Washington, DC. Phillip is currently working on his doctoral requirements in the Joint Ph.D Program in Anthropology and Linguistics at the University of Arizona. Previous to pursuing an advanced degree.

Myers Center for Research on Native American Issues. Her research and teaching focus on the areas of interdisciplinary Native American Studies, federal Indian law and policy, Native American identity, and Native California. Professor Chilcote grew up in the center of her tribe's traditional territory in the North County of San Diego, and she is active in tribal politics and other community efforts. She is the first person in her tribe to earn a PhD. Olivia's first book project investigates the politics and history of federal recognition in California and uses a case study of the San Luis Rey Band of Mission Indians. Her manuscript analyzes the intricacies of identities structured by legal definitions, the ways in which unrecognized tribes assert tribal sovereignty despite legal classifications, and how tribal engagement with the Federal Acknowledgment Process is part of a longer history of U.S.-tribal relationships. Her future research will build on themes explored in her manuscript including the limits of tribal sovereignty, identity, race, and gender in unrecognized tribal contexts across California and the United States, with implications for the politics of recognition of indigenous peoples internationally. She has presented her research at academic conferences including the Native American and Indigenous Studies Association, the American Studies Association, and the California Indian Conference. Her writing can be found in the forthcoming volume New Voices in California Indian Studies (ed. by Rising Baldy and Middleton Manning) and an update to the California edition of the Handbook of the North American Indians (Smithsonian Institution). She has also published work in Boletín: Journal of the California Missions Studies Assn, American Indian Culture and Research Journal and News From Native California.

Education: College of the Holy Cross, BA (Psychology & Economics), 2004; University of Denver, Sturm College of Law, JD, 2009. Affiliation & Address:

Co-coordinator, Native Affairs Partner (2019-present), Van Ness Feldman LLP, 2701 Lawrence St., Suite 116, Denver, CO 80205. E-mail: mcompton@gmail.com. Past professional posts: Associate, Greenberg Traurig, LLP, 2011-16; Of Counsel, Van Ness Feldman LLP, Denver, 2016-19. Maranda also served as a law clerk to Justice Allison H. Eid of the Supreme Court of Colorado (now of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit) and clerked for the Native American Rights Fund while in law school. Maranda's Indian law and tribal expertise is valuable across a wide range of industries. Specifically, Maranda counsels energy clients and project proponents in negotiations and consultation with tribes, where she brings a wealth of knowledge of the federal leasing and right-of-way regulations, tribal versus state jurisdiction, environmental permitting, and tribal employment rights. In the corporate context, Maranda represents tribal and non-tribal businesses and banks in commercial and lending transactions and related areas of federal, state, and tribal regulation. Maranda also represents tribal governmental and economic development entities on various matters relating to tribal regulatory development and code drafting, cultural preservation issues, compliance management and internal investigations, and commercial enterprise operation and financing. And when impassible issues arise, Maranda represents tribal and non-tribal clients in litigation in state, federal and tribal courts, as well as alternative dispute resolution. She specializes in the development of land, resources, and business opportunities in Indian Country -- with a focus on energy, technology, and facilitation between tribal and non-tribal entities. Her clients build and operate projects on Indian lands, invest in tribal businesses, create joint ventures with Tribal entities, and are Tribes themselves engaged in the commercial enterprises and cultural protection that serve as the heart of Native communities. Her value proposition is creating clear pathways through challenging terrain. A cornerstone of her approach is education and the sharing of knowledge regarding Native peoples and communities that frankly should have been taught and learned in grammar school. For non-Tribal clients, she provides in-house and virtual training programs that are the basis for progressive conversations and relationships with Indian Country. COOK, BEVERLY (Kiohawiton) (St. Regis Mohawk)
(tribal chief)

Affiliation & Address: Chief (2019-22), St. Regis Mowak Tribe, 3412 State Rt. 37, Akwesasne, NY 13655 (518) 358-2272. Chief Cook, a Family Nurse Practitioner, is a prominent voice in the mind-body medicine approach to restoring wellness, reproductive health and environmental justice for Mohawk people. She has presented her signature lecture, "Resilience from our Roots: You are Creation," to hundreds of community members as well as national and international audiences. The lecture weaves together Haudenosaunee traditions and beliefs with basic reproductive physiology, encouraging understanding of the responsibilities of men and women and an appreciation for the generational transmission of trauma through the generations. In her previous role as Clinic Coordinator, Chief Cook led the Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe's Health Services systems redesign. Her innovative approach, including patient-centered care, aligned with a national trend to address trauma as a root cause of adult illness. Her efforts resulted in the successful implementation of Trauma Incident Reduction and Adverse Childhood Experiences (or "ACE") Predictive Consequences, the foundation of how healthcare workers encounter personal interactions when TIR is effectively applied. Since her election to Tribal Council in 2013, Chief Cook has been selected by the United Southern and Eastern Tribes (USET) to represent the Nashville Area (which includes Akwesasne) on the Tribal Leaders Diabetes Committee and on the National Institutes of Health Tribal Consultation Advisory Committee. At home, she has been a valuable supporter of the Tribe's Annual Child Safe Summit Series and championed the Akwesasne Child Advocacy Center that provides victim-centered care for abused children. In 2011, Chief Cook was a Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Community Health Leader nominee. Chief Cook continues to seek ways to restore and enhance the health and safety of Akwesashró:non. "Integrating our traditional ways of knowing back into our contemporary lives is important," she notes. "The central fire that held everyone and everything together was nearly extinguished. These teachings and practices help gather that fire back up again." Chief Cook is active in traditional Indigenous practices and circles in her community of Akwesasne, where she lives on her ancestral home along the St. Lawrence River.

Running Strong for American Indian Youth, Alexandria, VA. Katsi created the First Environment Collaborative of Running Strong. Maternal & Child Health consultant for the Tribal Epidemiology Center at United South & Eastern Tribes (USET, Inc.), Nashville, TN; she was a Mohawk midwife, women's health advocate and activist for environmental restoration in her Tribal community, the Mohawk Nation of Akwesasne. Katsi is an Elder Mohawk grandmother and midwife who has led her people in a wide array of initiatives at the intersection of women's reproductive health issues and environmental justice. She initiated the Akwesasne Mother's Milk Project in 1981 to monitor and document levels of PCBs and other industrial pollutants in the breast milk of Mohawk mothers living near the St. Lawrence River. A midwife and women's health advocate through the lifecycle, she is especially interested in helping Native American women and girls develop control of their reproductive power and voices. As an environmental activist, she points out that "Women are the first environment. In pregnancy, our bodies sustain life. At the breast of women, the generations are nourished. In this way, we as women are Earth." Katsi bases her midwifery in Indigenous ancestral knowledge. A founder of the National Aboriginal Council of Midwives, she has worked to return Native knowledge of birthing to Native peoples, so that births can again take place in their own communities with the wisdom of their cultures. Early in her professional life, she tailored a training program that included academic coursework in health sciences and clinical training in community-based programs. She has researched, written, and lectured widely on the subject of Indigenous environmental reproductive health. Her home community of Akwesasne straddles both banks of the St. Lawrence River near Cornwall, Ontario, and includes parts of New York, Ontario, and Quebec. At home, Katsi is a founding member of Konon:kwe ("women") Council. Taking Kahnistensera, or "Mother Law," as its foundational principle, the members work as daughters of Sky Woman, weaving "webs of women's wisdom" with prayer, healing ceremonies, and grassroots activism to empower and transform their traumatized communities. Katsi is also the director of Spirit Aligned Leadership Program, which elevates the lives, voices, and dreams of Indigenous Elder women who are working to heal, strengthen and restore the balance of Indigenous communities. Published works: She has written numerous published essays, articles for Indian Country Today, and was featured speaker at Live Earth at the National Museum of the American Indian in Washington, DC in 2007. Awards, honors: Recipient of the 2004-05 Indigenous Knowledge Cultural Researcher Award from the Indigenous Health Research Development Program at U. of Toronto.

COTTON, BEVERLY (Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians)
(area director, Indian Health Service)

Education: Meridian Community College, AA (Nursing); University of Southern Mississippi, BS (Nursing); University of Alabama, MA (Nursing); Vanderbilt University, Doctor of Nursing Practice. Affiliation & Address: Director, Nashville Area Indian Health Service, 711 Stewarts Ferry Pike, Nashville, TN 37214 (615) 467-1505. E-mail: beverly.cotton@ihs.gov. Dr. Cotton is responsible for providing leadership in the administration of a comprehensive federal, tribal, and urban Indian health care system. The IHS Nashville Area covers a geographical area of 24 states located in the eastern, southeastern and mid-United States while serving 36 tribal nations located in 14 states. Cotton previously served as the acting director for the IHS Office of Clinical and Preventive Services. As acting director, she was the principal advisor for policy development, budget formulation, and delivery of headquarters programs, services, functions, and activities related to clinical, preventive, and public health services throughout IHS. Cotton joined IHS in 2011 as the national sexual assault nurse examiner coordinator and later established the Tribal Forensic Health Care Training Program. In 2013, she became the director for the IHS Division of Behavioral Health, leading a team of professionals in the development of new grant programs, training projects, and initiatives, including the Preventing Alcohol-Related Deaths grant program, Behavioral Health Integration Initiative, Zero Suicide Initiative, and a training series on trauma informed care. Before joining IHS, she worked as a primary care pediatric nurse practitioner and in several registered nurse roles, including as the emergency department nurse manager for the Choctaw Health Center in Choctaw, Mississippi. Prior to her health care career, she worked as a detention officer for the Choctaw Police Department and as a Native youth summer counselor in the Youth Opportunity Program for her tribe.

COTTRELL, COURTNEY (Brothertown Indian Nation)
(anthropologist; museum studies)

Education: University of Michigan, PhD (Museum Studies; Certificate in Museum Studies). Affiliation & Address: 2017-18 Chancellor's Postdoctoral Fellow, Department of Anthropology, University of Illinois, 1204 West Nevada St., Urbana, IL 61801 (217) 255-9870. E-mail: ccottre@illinois.edu. Her dissertation analyzes common museological practices ethnographic museums employ in the representation of American Indians. Though the practices she identifies appear to be liberal and transformative from the museums' origins as a colonial institution, they reinscribe dominant Euro-American ideologies of superiority and misrecognize tribal sovereignty. She is currently working on a project that explores the political upheaval NAGPRA creates between related tribal nations who are attempting to repatriate a single artifact. Her analysis of the strained relationship between her own tribe (Brothertown Indian Nation) and a cousin nation points to the clandestine identity politics federal legislation creates and maintains that circumvent self-determination efforts.

E-mail: sarah@clauselaw.com. E-mail: 605crawford@gmail.com. Before attending law school, Ms. Crawford spent five years in Washington, D.C. working in federal Indian policy. She spent several years working for U.S. Senator Tim Johnson of South Dakota, where she helped the Senator with his tribal portfolio. She wrote and aided in the introduction of legislation and appropriations provisions to preserve Native languages, provide tribal tax parity, eliminate barriers to economic development, ensure housing grants for Native communities, and retain the protection of Indian arts and crafts. After Senator Johnson's retirement, she transitioned to the National Indian Gaming Commission, where she was charged with the agency's legislative and intergovernmental affairs. Ms. Crawford was also detailed to the White House to help plan the Tribal Nations Conference, assisting in writing high-level memoranda to federal agency secretaries and President Obama. During law school, Ms. Crawford's earned her awards from the National Native American Bar Association, the National Order of Barristers, and the Native American Bar Association of Arizona. In April 2019, she authored "The Year of the Native Voter," which was published in the Arizona Attorney Magazine, a publication of the State Bar of Arizona. Ms. Crawford also was elected vice president and then later president of the National Native American Law Students Association. Ms. Crawford strove to supplement her classroom legal education with real world experience that not only helped her to hone her skills but also made a tangible difference in Indian Country. She spent the summer of 2019 working as a legal clerk at the Native American Rights Fund, where she focused on cases related to discriminatory voter identification laws, the protection of ancestral lands, and revisions to a tribal constitution. Ms. Crawford was also a legal intern at the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Office of the Prosecutor where she drafted court motions, filed criminal charges, and represented the Tribe during trial hearings. Sarah has direct experience with researching legislative policy, including a strong focus on American Indian affairs. Strong history of working one-on-one with American Indian tribes and tribal leaders on policy and legislative issues. Hands-on experience with human rights issues at the city level and implementing programs for leadership growth. Specialties: understanding of the introduction of U.S. Congressional legislation; policy research; high-level speech writing; event organization; meeting coordination; and small organization budget planning. He was later appointed by the agency's director as division chief of its Recruitment and Medical Division. Mr. Cruzan's law enforcement career began as a patrolman with the Joplin (Mo.) Police Department in 1992. He went on to serve as a police officer with his tribe until 1995, when he selected to work for the BIA's District II Law Enforcement (now OJS) Office in the Bureau's Eastern Oklahoma Regional Office in Muskogee, Okla. In 1998, Mr. Cruzan was promoted to the rank of Supervisory Police Officer and assigned to the United States Indian Police Academy located at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Artesia, N.M., where he provided law enforcement training to newly hired police, corrections and telecommunications officers working in Indian Country. In 2001, he was promoted to Criminal Investigator and assigned to the BIA's Portland, Ore., field office, where he carried out federal criminal investigations and provided technical law enforcement assistance to the federally recognized tribes in the Pacific Northwest. Mr. Cruzan's next promotion was to the post of Supervisory Special Agent on the Crow Indian Reservation in Montana. During his tenure his department was honored in 2004 by the Secretary of the Interior with DOI's "Customer Service Excellence Award" for their efforts in reducing the number of Driving Under the Influence-related fatalities on the reservation. Also in 2004, Mr. Cruzan accepted a request to serve as the Senior Law Enforcement Advisor to the BIA's Associate Director of Operations at its headquarters in Washington, D.C. While there, he also served as the Indian Country Law Enforcement liaison to the Department. He continued in both capacities until moving to the PFTA in 2006.

(assistant professor of history)

Education: Harvard College, BA; Yale University, MA, M.Phil, PhD; University of St. Andrews, Scotland, M.Litt. Affiliation & Address: Assistant Professor of History, Mount Holyoke College, 50 College St., 302 Skinner Hall, South Hadley, MA 01075 (413) 538-2451. E-mail: cdelucia@mtholyoke.edu. Other professional post: Co-Chairperson, Five College Native American and Indigenous Studies, 97 Spring St., Amherst, MA. Specialties: federal Indian law, criminal jurisdiction in Indian Country, tribal sovereignty, federal acknowledgement of tribes, identity. Christine specializes in indigenous and colonial histories of North America, particularly in the Northeast/New England. Her current research is on the conflict known as King Philip's War (1675-1678), which violently transformed Algonquian & Euro-American settler communities in the late seventeenth century. This war—one of the formative events of early America—did more than momentarily disrupt these societies. It dramatically altered the balance of power in the Northeast, and shaped how subsequent generations have understood themselves, their entangled histories, and their presence on lands that remain disputed. As DeLucia's work shows, memories of this war and related violences continue to inflect discourses about sovereignty, dispossession, decolonization, and regeneration. DeLucia approaches early American and indigenous histories in an interdisciplinary manner. Besides working extensively in regional and local archives, she also draws upon material and visual culture—such as paintings, household objects, & family heirlooms—archaeological sources, ethnography and oral history, and the land itself. Her goal is to bring into the historical conversation voices, perspectives, and narratives that have tended to be overlooked or marginalized by dominant conceptions of the past, and to stress the dynamic, contested character of history-making. DeLucia has published articles in The Journal of American History, Studies in American Indian Literatures; Rethinking History: The Journal of Theory & Practice; and Common-place. Her first book, The Memory Frontier: Memorializing King Philip's War in the Native Northeast is under contract with Yale University Press. Her research has received support from the John Carter Brown Library, American Antiquarian Society, Massachusetts Historical Society, New England Regional Fellowship Consortium, and Phillips Fund for Native American Research from the American Philosophical Society. Other sources of grants and awards include the Newberry Consortium in American Indian Studies, the Council on Library and Information Resources/ Mellon Foundation, Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition. At Mount Holyoke, DeLucia teaches The American Peoples to 1865; Native American History; Violence in Early North America; Homelands and New Worlds; Cartography and Exploration in North America; and The Atlantic World.

(Indian law clinic director; professor of practice)

Affiliation & Address: Director & Professor of Practice, Indigenous Peoples Law & Policy (IPLP) Tribal Justice Clinic, The University of Arizona, James E. Roger College of Law, RH 304, P.O. Box 210176, Tucson, AZ 85721 (520) 626-9762. Diamond completed his Doctor of Juridical Science (SJD) with IPLP in 2014. His doctoral dissertation focused on reconciliation after mass shootings and the history of criminal dispute resolution among the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians and other indigenous communities. His academic publications include research about law enforcement in Indian Country & tribal membership litigation. Prior to earning his SJD, Diamond practiced law for 27 years, including serving as a Connecticut Assistant State's Attorney, managing a law firm, and being a criminal prosecutor and defense attorney. Certified by the National Board of Trial Advocacy as a Criminal Trial Specialist, Diamond has tried more than 30 jury trials to verdict. Over the course of his career he has represented clients in pre-trial hearings, trials, and appeals, defending more than 1,000 criminal cases. He is admitted to practice law in the states of Arizona, New York, and Connecticut, the Pascua Yaqui Tribal Court, the Mashantucket Pequot Tribal Court, and numerous federal trial and appellate courts. In addition to teaching in the Bachelor of Arts in Law and Master of Legal Studies programs at Arizona Law, Diamond is a faculty member at the National Tribal Trial College, a collaboration between the Southwest Center for Law and Policy and the University of Wisconsin School of Law. He advises Indian tribes and has conducted training of tribal court prosecutors, defense lawyers, and judges on trial skills and ethics in tribal courts. "I'm thrilled to join the world class faculty at IPLP," said Diamond. "This faculty has literally written the book on Indian law and international human rights for indigenous peoples. The program is well known for engaging students in cutting edge litigation and advocacy, and I'm looking forward to expanding hands-on casework for our students in the new Tribal Justice Clinic

E-mail: doerflj@d.umn.edu "My primary area of scholarly interest is American Indian, specifically Anishinaabe, identity with a political focus on citizenship. Growing up on the White Earth reservation, I was all too familiar with the divisions that the use of blood quantum as the sole requirement for tribal citizenship (1961) caused. Families were literally divided with some possessing the blood quantum required for citizenship and others lacking it. My research is premised on my commitment to bridging scholarly efforts with the practical needs of American Indian peoples, communities, and nations. My research draws upon both historical documents and literature to delineate Anishinaabe conceptions of identity in the 20th and 21st centuries. I am especially interested in the ways in which Anishinaabeg resisted pseudo-scientific measures of blood (race/blood quantum) as a means to define identity. One of my newer areas of research dovetails with community service and focuses on the process of constitutional reform. I have been working with the White Earth Nation since 2007 on constitutional reform efforts. I have found working with the White Earth Nation to be rewarding and it has solidified my commitment to partnerships between scholars and Native nations." Past professional posts: Chancellor's Postdoctoral Fellow in American Indian Studies at the University of Illinois (2007-08).

I would like to work for a tribe as a judge or legal counsel when I am finished with law school. I have always been active in the field of voting rights for Indian people. I was one of the plaintiffs in a landmark voting rights case in South Dakota captioned Buckanaga v. Sisseton School District. We were the first group of American Indians to file a voting rights act complaint in the U.S. After seven years of litigation, we were able to settle our case out of court, and as a result of our long struggle, we had the old at-large voting system in the Sisseton School District replaced by a cumulative voting scheme. Now for the first time i the history of the Sisseton-Wahpeton Sioux Tribe, Indian parents were able to elect candidates of their choice to sit on the Sisseton School Board. I envision a day soon when an Indian will win an election in South Dakota to the U.S. Senate on the strength of Indian votes."

Louise Erdrich is an American author whose award-winning novels include 2008's The Plague of Doves and 2012's The Roundhouse (a National Book Award winner). Her novels are interwoven tales inspired and informed by her experiences in Native American reservations and as a member of the Ojibwe (Chippewa) tribe on her mother's side. From the midwest, she attended Dartmouth College in the early 1970s — in the first class that allowed women — and there she studied Native American literature and culture under author Michael Dorris, who would become her husband in 1981. While raising their six children, Erdrich wrote poems and then novels, winning critical praise along the way and producing bestselling books. She also collaborated with Dorris on various works, but they divorced in 1995. Dorris committed suicide in 1997, amid allegations that he'd abused their children. Her other novels include, Love Medicine (1984), Tracks (1988), The Antelope Wife (1998), The Game of Silence (2005), Shadow Tag (2010) and LaRose (2016). Awards, honors: 2021 Pulitzer Prize for Fiction for her novel, "The Night Watchman."

EYRE, CHRIS (Cheyenne & Arapaho) 1969-
(film director & producer)

Born in 1969 on the Warm Springs Reservation, near Portland, Oreg. Education: Mt. Hood Community College, AA (Television production), 1989; University of Arizona, BA; New York University, MFA (Filmmaking), 1995. Affiliation & Address: President (1997-present), Riverhead Entertainment, Film Director & Producer, c/o Jim Ehrich, The Rothman Brecher Agency, 9250 Wilshire Blvd. Penthouse, Beverly Hills, CA 90212 (310) 247-9898. Website: www.chriseyre.org. Chris attempts to display portraits of contemporary Native Americans as individuals who are plagued by problems common to all people, but who react within the confines of their own particular circumstances. After receiving accolades for his short films while obtaining his Master's degree at New York University, Eyre approached distinguished Native American writer Sherman Alexie with the desire to transform Alexie's The Lone Ranger and Tonto Fistfight in Heaven (1993) into a film. Determined to produce an honest portrayal of Native American life, the result was the highly acclaimed Smoke Signals (1998). Eyre's other productions have included a music video, Things We Do (1998), a documentary, Doe Boy (2001), and films, Skins (2002), Skinwalkers (TV) (2002 and A Thief of Time (TV) (2003). He also founded Riverhead Entertainment, a production company that for several years produced commercials, films, and documentaries. Film credits: "Smoke Signals," director and producer, 1998; "The Doe Boy," producer, 2001; "Skins," director and producer, 2002; "Skinwalkers," director, 2002; "Edge of America," director and producer, 2003; "A Thief of Time," director, 2004; "A Thousand Roads," director, 2005; "Imprint," producer, 2007; "After the Mayflower," director, 2007; "Tecumseh's Vision," director, 2008; "Trail of Tears," director, 2008; "A Year in Mooring, director," 2011. His films focus on all aspects of contemporary Native American life, while dispelling the usual stereotypes. Chris has directed two episodes of the famed PBS series, "Mystery." In 2008 Eyre directed the first three episodes of "We Shall Remain," a mini-series that establishes Native history as an essential part of American history from PBS's acclaimed history series, "American Experience," "The Doe Boy," producer, 2010. Awards, honors: Won the 1998 Sundance Film Festival, Filmmakers Trophy & the Audience Award for "Smoke Signals"; "Best Film" honors at the 1998 American Indian Film Festival for "Smoke Signals"; "Edge of America" was the 2004 Sundance Film Festival "opening night" film, and won the DGA's award for Outstanding Directorial Achievement in Children's Programs, becoming the first Native American to win the award; "A Thousand Roads," Eyre's short film was the signature film" for the Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian, opened in Washington, DC April 10, 2005; he was named a 2007 USA Rockefeller Foundation Fellow & awarded a $50,000 grant by United States Artists, a public charity; in June 2007, won the Bush Foundation's Artists Fellows Program.

Before practicing law, Abi worked for the Notah Begay III Foundation, a nonprofit organization focused on supporting tribal communities and organizations committed to developing programs for Native youth geared at reducing childhood obesity and type 2 diabetes. While at the Foundation, Abi developed marketing and communication materials designed to educate key stakeholders in the health of Native American youth – including philanthropic organizations, tribal communities, and federal agencies – on the dire health crises facing tribal communities. While in law school, Abi served as President of OU Law's Native American Law Student Association. She completed a legal internship in the Office of Tribal Justice at the Department of Justice. In this role she participated in discussions with the Department of Justice and other federal agencies that were directly involved with Native American issues concerning civil rights, environment and natural resources, and tribal governance. Abi also interned at an Indian-owned law firm where she assisted in developing & revising tribal codes, prepared court documents for tribal and state courts concerning Indian Child Welfare cases, child support enforcement and domestic violence related representation. During Abi's undergraduate career at Oklahoma State University, she worked for Congressman Tom Cole. While serving in Congressman Cole's office she experienced firsthand the importance of protecting tribal sovereignty through advocacy. This experience encouraged her to pursue a career in law with a focus on protecting tribal rights.

GILBERT, MATTHEW SAKIESTEWA (Hopi)
(professor and department head of American Indian studies)

Education: University of California, Riverside, MA & PhD; MA in theology from the Talbot School of Theology/Biola University. Affiliation & Address: Professor and Department Head, Department of American Indian Studies, University of Arizona, 218 Harvill, 1103 East 2nd St., P.O. Box 210076, Tucson, AZ 85721 (520) 621-7108; E-mail: sakiestewa@email.arizona.edu. Centering his research and teaching on Native American history and the history of the American West, he examines the history of American Indian education, the Indian boarding school experience, and American Indians and sport. In addition to publishing articles and books on Hopi history, he has produced a documentary film -- Beyond the Mesas -- on the Hopi experience at off-reservation Indian boarding schools, including Sherman Institute, Stewart Indian School, and the Phoenix Indian School. In his current book project, Modern Encounters of the Hopi Past, he analyzes the ways Hopi people operated within and beyond their ancestral lands, including their participation in the U.S. military, American film industry, various music ensembles, and higher education. It is a history that seeks to understand the Hopi past by examining the life experiences of Hopi themselves. It places the people and their voices at the center of the story and aims to demonstrate how they navigated distant lands beyond their mesas. It examines Hopi encounters of the outside world and highlights moments when the outside world also encountered the Hopi. Similar to the works by other Native scholars, this book is tribal specific, unapologetically so, and deeply grounded in his identity as a Hopi individual. In this regard, it is a personal history, but one that is closely connected to larger events and themes in Hopi and American society. Modern Encounters of the Hopi Past has been informed by his two previous monographs. His first book, Education beyond the Mesas: Hopi Students at Sherman Institute, 1902-1929 (University of Nebraska Press, 2010), examines the Hopi experience at Sherman Institute, an off-reservation Indian boarding school in Riverside, California. Advancing the contributions of other scholars in the fields of history, education, and indigenous studies, Gilbert uncovers the complex ways that Hopi history and culture intersected with U.S. government policies. In addition to providing an historical narrative, the book challenges the notion that a study on the Indian boarding school experience must be understood primarily through a defined framework of Indian education policies. Highlighting Native agency, the book also explores the many ways that Indian pupils -- Zunis, Navajos, Apaches and other Indian people -- brought their identities to school and how they responded to their boarding school experience as people from indigenous communities. In his second monograph, Hopi Runners: Crossing the Terrain between Indian and American (University Press of Kansas, 2018), he examines the ways Hopi marathon runners navigated between tribal dynamics, school loyalties, and a country that closely associated sport with U.S. nationalism. He calls attention to Hopi philosophies of running that connected the runners to their village communities and to the internal and external forces that supported and strained these cultural ties when Hopis competed in U.S. marathons. He argues that between 1908 and 1936, the cultural identity of Hopi runners challenged white American perceptions of modernity and placed them in a context that had national and international dimensions. This broad perspective linked Hopi runners to athletes from around the world, including runners from Japan and Ireland, and caused non-Natives to reevaluate their understandings of sport, nationhood, and the cultures of indigenous people. His work and expertise on Hopi running has been featured in a ESPN documentary film entitled "Run Hopi" by Scott Harves (click here for the 15 minute version) and various news outlets, including the University of Illinois News Bureau and The News-Gazette. In addition to his research and writing, he is co-editor of the Indigenous Education series with the University of Nebraska Press, and serves on the Editorial Board of the Journal of Sport and Social Issues. He is also a member of the advisory boards for the exhibits Resilience: Stories of the American Indian Boarding School Experience (The Heard Museum, Phoenix, AZ), and Fleet of Foot: Indigenous Running and Games from Ancient Times to Today (Amerind Museum, Dragoon, AZ). Past professional posts: Associate Professor, American Indian Studies and History, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, University of Chicago, Urbana, IL. Professor Gilbert centered his research and teaching on Native American history and the history of the American West. He examines the history of American Indian education, the Indian boarding school experience, and American Indians and sports. He also served on the Editorial Board of the History of Education Quarterly, and as a board member of the Hopi Education Endowment Fund. Post-doctoral Research Associate in American Indian Studies at the University of Illinois-Urbana-Champaign, and as an adjunct faculty in history at the University of Redlands, Azusa Pacific University, San Bernardino Valley Community College, and The Master's College. Awards, honors: Spur Award for "Marathoner Louis Tewanima and the Continuity of Hopi Running, 1908-1912," Best Western Short Nonfiction, Western Writers of America (2013); Helen Corley Petit Scholar Award, College of Liberal Arts & Sciences, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (2013-14). Produced a documentary film -- Beyond the Mesas -- on the Hopi boarding school experience. Published works: Education Beyond the Mesa: Hopi Students at Sherman Institute, 1902-1929 (University of Nebraska Press, 2010); Editor, with Clifford E. Trafzer and Lorene Sisquoc, The Indian School on Magnolia Avenue: Voices and Images from Sherman Institute (Oregon State University Press, 2012); co-edits new series, "Indigenous Confluences," (University of Washington Press, 2013); Hopi Runner: Crossing the Terrain Between Indian & American, 1908-1932 (University Press of Kansas, 2018); numerous articles in scholarly journals and book contributions.

(professor of education; center director)

Education: Syracuse University, BFA; Kent State University, MA, PhD. Affiliation & Address: Professor of Education, Faculty Director (2015-present) Center for the Critical Study of Race & Ethnicity, Connecticut College, 270 Mohegan Ave., New London, CT 06320 (860) 439-2763. E-mail: smgra@conncollege.edu. As a teacher and scholar, Professor Grande centers her work in the belief that education is the heart of a critical democracy. Rather than reject matters of politics, Professor Grande views teachers as the link between the education of an informed citizenry and the imperatives of democracy. She asserts that education cannot be reduced to technical or "training" models but must address questions of power, subjectivity, and the possibility of collective agency, through the foundational disciplines of the liberal arts. She teaches a variety of courses including The Foundations of Education, Methods of Teaching in the Secondary School, Education and Public Policy, Introduction to Native American and Indigenous Studies, Theorizing Race and Ethnicity and the Biopolitics of Race. Grande is a full professor in the Education Department and became director of the Center for the Comparative Study of Race and Ethnicity in 2015, a Center that she also helped to found (2004-05). She also served as a faculty fellow in the Holleran Center for Community Action and Public Policy (2011-13) as well as in a number of administrative capacities at the College including faculty representative on the Strategic Planning Committee (2003-04), Special Adviser to the President for Institutional Equity and Diversity (2004-05) and Interim Dean for Institutional Equity and Inclusion (2015). Her research examines the intersections between Education, Critical Theory and Native American and Indigenous Studies. Her landmark book, Red Pedagogy: Native American Social and Political Thought was recently published in a 10th-anniversary edition and a Portuguese translation is anticipated to be published in Brazil in 2019. She has also published over thirty chapters and articles in a variety of journals including The Journal of Settler Colonial Studies, The Harvard Educational Review, Educational Theory, The International Journal of Qualitative Studies in Education and The Journal of Curriculum and Pedagogy. Her current book project examines global aging through the lens of Native Studies and the experiences of Indigenous elders.

GRANT, FRANK (Yurok)

GRANT, JILL ELISE
(attorney; Native American law)

Education: Yale College, BA, 1976; Harvard Law School, JD, 1981. Affiliation & Address: Founder & Principal, Jill Grant & Associates, 1319 F St., NW, Suite 300, Washington, DC 20004 (202) 821-1950. Website: <http://jillgrantlaw.com>. Awards, honors: Best Lawyers, 2018. Jill has extensive background in environmental, administrative, and federal Indian law. Before starting her own law firm, Ms. Grant was a partner in private practice, representing Indian tribes on environmental and federal Indian law issues. Previously Ms. Grant was an attorney at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Office of General Counsel, where she was on the team that drafted the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 and worked on various regulations implementing that legislation, including the acid rain marketable allowance program. She litigated issues under the Clean Air Act and also worked on radiation protection and indoor air programs. While at EPA, Ms. Grant also participated in the development of EPA's "treatment as a state" policy, and she continues to work vigorously on behalf of tribes in the environmental arena. Ms. Grant assists tribes with developing their own environmental programs and authorities and receiving "treatment as a state" and "primacy" approvals from EPA. Jill also assists tribes with implementing and enforcing their environmental laws, and has successfully litigated many tribal environmental cases. Ms. Grant has drafted tribal laws and regulations addressing air quality, water quality, wetlands protection, solid waste management, Superfund (including Brownfields), safe drinking water, petroleum storage tanks, pesticides, and hazardous materials, and also has represented tribes on nuclear waste issues and hazardous materials transportation. She obtained EPA approval for the only tribal public water systems supervision program in the country and EPA delegation of the first tribal operating permit program under the Clean Air Act. The latter brings in revenue in the form of permit fees, which supports tribal program administration costs. Ms. Grant also helped a tribe obtain primacy for one of the first two tribal underground injection control programs in the country, and has assisted with many EPA approvals of tribal water quality standards. In addition, she advises both tribal environmental program staff and tribal leadership on environmental program development and assists them in implementing and enforcing the tribal environmental programs that she helped them develop. For example, she provides continuing advice to a tribal air quality program regarding permit issuance and successfully represented the tribal program before EPA's Environmental Appeals Board in Peabody Western Coal Co. Jill also provides continuing advice and enforcement assistance to a tribal storage tank program and successfully defended the tribe against underground storage tank liability in federal court. The federal environmental laws and the "treatment as a state" process often raise issues as to tribal jurisdiction, which Ms. Grant has negotiated and litigated. For example, she successfully represented tribal intervenors in a case upholding tribal jurisdiction over air quality within reservations, including tribal trust lands. Jill was also co-counsel representing the Navajo Nation in a case involving jurisdiction over an in situ uranium leach mine. She was successful in having EPA recognize that tribal jurisdiction under the Safe Drinking Water Act extends to tribal trust and allotted lands (including split estates) outside formal reservation boundaries. Ms. Grant also has filed several tribal amicus briefs before the U.S. Supreme Court, including in BP America Production Co. v. Burton, 549 U.S. 84 (2006) (a mineral royalties case in which the Court upheld the tribal amicus position).

(actor)

Graham's TV debut was in an episode of The Great Detective in 1979, and his screen debut was in 1983 in Running Brave. He appeared in such films as Revolution and Powwow Highway, as well as the First Nations' CBC TV series Spirit Bay. It was his Academy Award-nominated role as Kicking Bird (Lakota: Ziŋtká Nagwáka) in the 1990 film Dances with Wolves that brought him fame. He followed with work in films including Thunderbolt, Benefit of the Doubt, and Maverick, and television series Northern Exposure and The Red Green Show. Greene also acted alongside Bruce Willis and Samuel L. Jackson in the 1995 film Die Hard with a Vengeance, where he played Detective Joe Lambert. He hosted the reality crime documentary show Exhibit A: Secrets of Forensic Science. Greene co-starred as Slick Nakai with Adam Beach and Wes Studi in the film A Thief of Time (2004) and Coyote Waits, both adapted from Tony Hillerman novels of the same names and produced by Robert Redford. In 1992, Greene played the role of Ishi, the last Yahi, in the HBO drama The Last of His Tribe.<sup>[5]</sup> He appeared that year in contemporary action-mystery film, Thunderheart (1992), playing Walter Crow Horse, a gruff, savvy local cop living on an Indian reservation. In 1994, he began appearing as Mr. Crabby Tree in the children's series The Adventures of Dudley the Dragon, for which he received the Gemini Award. Poltergeist The Legacy: Finding Richter aired May 9, 1997. In 1997, Greene suffered a major depressive episode, and had to be hospitalized after a police encounter. He recovered after help from Bruce Willis and Samuel L. Jackson. Greene was featured as Arlen Bitterbuck, a Native American convicted of murder, awaiting execution on death row in the Oscar-nominated The Green Mile (1999). He starred in the short-lived television series Wolf Lake in 2001. In 2002 and 2004, he co-starred in two made-for-TV films that were an attempt at launching a revival of the long-running Canadian series The Beachcombers. In 2005, he played the potential love interest of the female lead in Transamerica. He appeared as himself in a parody of the famous Lakota-brand pain reliever commercials, on CBC Television's Rick Mercer Report.<sup>[4]</sup> In 2006, Greene presented the documentary series The War that Made America, about the Seven Years' War (French and Indian War) of the mid-18th century in North America. In 2007, he appeared as Shylock in the Stratford Shakespeare Festival production of The Merchant of Venice as well as Breakfast with Scot. In June 2008, he was awarded an honorary doctor of law degree from the Brantford campus of Wilfrid Laurier University located near the Six Nations reserve he is from.<sup>[5]</sup> Awards, honors: He was nominated for the Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor for his performance in Dances with Wolves (1990). include Thunderheart (1992), Maverick (1994), Die Hard with a Vengeance (1995), The Green Mile (1999), Skins (2002), Transamerica (2005), Casino Jack (2010), Winter's Tale (2014), The Shack (2017), and Wind River (2017). Director of a non-profit, "Not Our Native Daughters". Due to working on eradicating human trafficking for several years, I noticed there was no organization focused on Native American victims. I have a personal passion working with the Native American communities, on education, training and offering victim services of sexual assault. Moreover, I have ten years of experience in different community relations volunteerism, mostly with the federal correction facility in Florence, Arizona. I have served the women's unit as counselor in the mentorship program, to which continued upon their release - most of which - were victims of sex trafficking by various forms. Furthermore, surviving and overcoming the many obstacles of being a sexual assault victim myself - I have a personal passion for victims. In addition to my experience in victim advocacy; I experienced 10 years in the finance industry. My prior work history as a project manager, workflow coordinator for Bank of American Home Loans, in the underwriter business support unit. I organized, distribute work assignments to offices nationwide and monitored their progress on a daily basis. Executive summaries and reports were a routine process to which it has enhanced my leadership, organizational and professional work ethics. As a Native American and tribal consultant for the AMBER Alert/AMBER in Indian Country Program, I understand the importance of collaboration with tribal government and this has increased my knowledge of how tribal nations work with outside entities. It's a high priority of the Native American people that our culture and sovereignty be honored. It's a goal to strengthen infrastructure in tribal government, advancing justice in native communities and bring to light the existence of human trafficking of Native Americans.

Born and raised in Holdenville, Okla. Education: University of Oklahoma (Art & Film). Contact: blakebrownem@gmail.com. Sterlin received a fellowship from the Sundance Institute in 2004. His short film, Goodnight, Irene, premiered at the 2005 Sundance Film Festival and received a special jury award at the Aspen Shortfest. In 2006, he received a fellowship from the newly formed United States Artists foundation. Harjo's first feature film, Four Sheets to the Wind, tells the story of a young Seminole man who travels from his small hometown to Tulsa to visit his sister after the death of their father. The film premiered at the 2007 Sundance Film Festival where it was nominated for the grand jury prize. Harjo was named best director at the 2007 American Indian Film Festival. Harjo's second feature, Barking Water, premiered at the 2008 Sundance Film Festival. It portrays a road trip by a dying man and his former lover across Oklahoma to see his daughter and granddaughter in Wewoka, the capital of the Seminole Nation. Barking Water was named best drama film at the 2009 American Indian Film Festival. His first feature documentary, This May Be the Last Time, is based on the story of Harjo's grandfather, who disappeared in 1962 in the Seminole County town of Sasakwa. It explores the subject of Creek Nation hymns and their connection to Scottish, folk, gospel and rock music. The film premiered at the 2014 Sundance Film Festival. Sterlin third feature film, Mekko, a thriller set in Tulsa, premiered at the Los Angeles Film Festival in June 2015. Mekko paints the portrait of a homeless Native American parolee who seeks to save his chaotic yet beautiful community from the darkness that threatens it. Harris has spent many years training the executive branch of the federal government that tribes are an integral part of the political fabric of the U.S. She has held hundreds of forum on the issues surrounding the interaction between tribes and federal agencies. She applies much of her energy in reinforcing & strengthening tribal government. She has encouraged tribes to reweave traditional value based methods of consensus building into their governance systems. Harris was instrumental in the adoption of official Indian policies by the EPA, the Dept. of Energy, and Dept. of Agriculture. She still advocates for every federal department to create Indian policies that reaffirm a government-to-government relationship. In recent years, Harris has devoted much of her energies to her newest initiatives, the Americans for Indian Opportunity Ambassadors Program, which researches and demonstrates the innovations of Indigenous leadership development and identity. She believes that part of her own work as a leader must be mentoring and cultivating new leaders to take her place & the places of others like her. Consequently, the Ambassadors Program was designed to facilitate this trans-generational transition of leadership in Indian Country. This award-winning initiative is the only leadership program in the U.S. that encourages its participants to weave their respective traditional tribal values into a contemporary reality. Published works: LaDonna Harris: A Comanche Life, book edited by Henrietta Stockel (University of Nebraska Press, 2000); books and pamphlets published by the Americans for Indian Opportunity, including: A Resource Bibliography for Tribal Participation in Environmental Protection Activities, 1990; Tribal Governments in the U.S. Federal System, 1990; Designing the Future of the Comanche Tribe, 1990; To All My Comanche Relatives, 1990; Tribal Governments As Rural Health Providers; Designing the Economic Future of the Menominee People, 1991; Partnerships for the Protection of Tribal Environments, 1991; significant papers include: "To Govern or Be Governed: Indian Tribes at a Crossroads"; "Partnerships for the Protection of Tribal Environments"; "Indian Business Opportunities and the Defense Sector"; "Alternatives for Agriculture: Successful Tribal Farms"; "Hard Choices: Development of Non-Energy, Non-Replenishable Resources"; "Tribal Governments in the U.S. Federal System".

E-mail: kathayes@umn.edu. "My research, based in various North American colonial contexts, stems from a challenge to the dominant narratives about the inevitability of colonial outcomes. In particular I am interested in issues of agency, negotiation, resistance, and opportunistic power demonstrated by peoples who history once popularly regarded as having been totally powerless in contexts of European colonization, like indigenous communities & enslaved Africans and African Americans. I have pursued these issues, most recently at sites in New York and Minnesota, by examining the often silent materiality of social relations which were not controlled by European settlers. This arena has led me to work in the productive tension between history and archaeology, the curated and the abandoned, memory and forgetting, and most importantly in conflicting notions of heritage."

HIPP, JANIE SIMMS (Chickasaw)
(attorney; general counsel of the USDA)

Education: Oklahoma City University Law School, JD; University of Arkansas, School of Law, LLM (Agriculture and Food Law). Affiliation & Address: General Counsel, U.S. Department of Agriculture, 1400 Independence Ave., SW • Washington, DC 20250 (202) 205-1514. Before serving as CEO of the Native American Agriculture Fund, Janie Simms Hipp, a citizen of the Chickasaw Nation, was the founding director of the Indigenous Food and Agriculture Initiative at the University of Arkansas. Prior to launching the initiative, she served as national program leader for Farm Financial Management, Trade Adjustment Assistance, Risk Management Education, and the Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development programs at the United States Department of Agriculture National Institute for Food and Agriculture. She was thereafter selected as the senior advisor for tribal relations to Secretary Tom Vilsack and director of the Office of Tribal Relations. Prior to her work in Washington, D.C., at the national level, she has enjoyed a lengthy domestic and international career spanning more than 35 years in the agriculture sector as an agriculture and food lawyer and policy expert. Her work focuses on the complex intersection of Indian law and agriculture and food law. She is the author of numerous publications, most recently joining with Wilson Pipestem, J.D., and Crystal EchoHawk to author the Feeding Ourselves report and thereafter the Regaining our Future report with Colby Duren, J.D. She serves as an advisor to the Shakopee Mdewakanton Sioux Community's Seeds of Native Health campaign and numerous other campaigns focusing on food, agriculture, health and economic development in Indian Country. Awards, honors: Received the National Center for American Indian Economic Development's 2017 Tim Wapato Public Advocate of the Year Award. Ms. Hipp teaches agricultural law and is co-founder (with Professor Jennie Popp of the University of Arkansas), of the national organization, Native Women in Agriculture. The Initiative is the first of its kind nationally, with the following goals and objectives: To increase student enrollment in the land grant universities in food and agricultural related disciplines by supporting existing students and creating early pipeline programs for youth; To create new academic and executive education programs in food and agriculture, including law, policy, and tribal governance; To directly support Indian country by providing strategic planning and technical assistance, including research and publications in the following subject areas: Tribal Governance Infrastructure to Enhance Business and Economic Development Opportunities Financial Markets and Asset Management, including Banking, Risk Management, and Stewardship of Land and Natural Resources; Health and Nutrition Policy for Tribal Community Wellness; Intellectual Property Rights and Protection of Traditional Knowledge. Until 2004 there had never been a national organization for Indian women who owned and operated farms. There are currently about 12,000 Indian women operating farms in the U.S., according to the 2002 Census of Agriculture. With the help from a three-year, $200,000 grant from the Dept. of Agriculture, the two were able to start such a group. The group was formed in partnership with the Intertribal Agriculture Council in Billings, MT, which promotes the conservation and development of Indian farming among the 573 federally recognized tribal government and Alaskan villages. The operation of the Native Women in Agriculture will be turned over to the council in 2006.

(singer, songwriter, philanthropist, a tribal advocate)
Affiliation & Address: President/Owner, Indigenous Networks, LLC, Lac du Flambeau, WI (2008-present). Visit <http://spiritofanikwe.com/meet-the-band> to learn about the Kelly Jackson. E-mail: spiritofanikwe@gmail.com. Indigenous Networks is an American Indian/Native American owned and operated natural and cultural resource management firm located in Madison Wisconsin. They offer multidisciplinary environmental consultation services, comprehensive historic preservation planning, sustainable community-wide planning, specialized archaeological services, traditional cultural property studies, National Register nomination assistance and many other support services for implementing NEPA, NAGPRA, ARPA, AIRFA and other environmental and civil rights laws. Other related services include formal training and workshops, grant writing, youth empowerment programs, multigenerational programming, interpretive and heritage tourism programming and museum services. Other professional posts: Board Member, State Historic Preservation Review Board, Madison, WI, 2000-present; Singer/Songwriter/ Producer, Spirit of An Ikwe Productions, 1995-present; Past professional posts: Statewide Tribal Liaison, Wisconsin Department of Transportation, 2010-present; Tribal Historic Preservation Officer, Lac du Flambeau Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, 1996-2010. Jackson has been nominated for many prestigious music awards like the Native American Music Association Award. Jackson expresses her life experiences through music with heart and passion. She composes rhythms that compliment her native roots and lyrical messages that invoke healing, self-empowerment, and cultural reflection. Her self-produced debut album, Spirit of a Woman won the Native American Music Association Award (NAMA) for the 2018 Best Americana Album of the Year. It is homage to the powerful Indigenous women in her life who helped her to get where she is today. It honors women who find the hard balance between career, community and family. It's a shout-out to all the women who are "making it happen." A philanthropist, Jackson co-founded Spirit of a Woman, a Wisconsin-based nonprofit organization that provides personal and professional development for women and girls. Music is the foundation of the nonprofit, but it has flowered into a much bigger effort and body of work. Programming includes workshops and other activities designed to help young girls aged 8 to 18 grow in self-confidence. The Indigenous Girls Rock Camp is a music education camp that teaches girls how to learn an instrument, write an original song, perform their song for a live concert, and explore their inner creativity. "This camp gives girls a glimpse into life as an artist," said Jackson. "The journey through music is rewarding. Music is medicine. Music opens-up the spirit." Formerly, a tribal historic preservation director and a 15-year environmental protection officer, Jackson uses her form of music as a way of storytelling. The song "Gaawiin Niiwi Izaasiin (I Don't Want to Go)" is the legacy of survival among America's Indigenous communities following the mandated US Indian boarding school policy in the mid-1800s, and its impact on tribal families and communities. Boarding schools destroyed language, connections, family structures, and culture. Gaawiin Niiwi Izaasiin is a song about a young boy's journey through boarding school and his family's fight for him. It is an emotional bridge for listeners, but it is also a source of healing for community and culture.

E-mail: jjacobson@thejacobsonlawgroup.com. John began his work in Indian Country in 1973 with the United States Department of the Interior, Office of the Solicitor. In that capacity, he advised and represented the Department with respect to Indian treaty rights and land claims questions throughout the Midwest. After ten years with the Office of the Solicitor, he entered private practice in 1983, founding the firm that became The Jacobson Law Group, P.C. Since that time, John has devoted his career to representing Indian tribes, tribal entities, and persons having an interest in Indian-law matters. He directed litigation and conducted negotiations that led to the development of Indian gaming in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Louisiana; he represented the only Indian tribal government that, following the passage of the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act of 1988, obtained Federal approval to operate gaming away from its reservation in a metropolitan area. John has extensive experience in on- and off-reservation financing. He served as principal adviser on Indian legal matters to publicly-held corporations extensively involved in Indian gaming, and as counsel to banks and institutions engaged in participating in financing development in Indian Country. In 1995, he served as special counsel to the underwriters of the first publicly traded bond issue by an Indian Tribe in the United States — the financing, by the Mohegan Tribe of Connecticut, of the Mohegan Sun Casino. John is an adjunct professor at William Mitchell College of Law, teaching Indian Law, and is a frequent lecturer throughout the United States to lawyers and business organizations on the subject of Indian law and Indian gaming. Specializes in tribal government, tribal sovereignty and self-determination; gaming law, land-into-trust; land claims; tribal codes and economic development. Mr. Jordan has practiced Federal Indian law since 1987, working as an in-house attorney, Associate Solicitor for Indian Affairs, and in private practice. Mr. Jordan's career as a lawyer has been dedicated to the representation of Indian tribes and tribal organizations and the promotion of tribal sovereignty. Mr. Jordan has served as an in-house tribal attorney for the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe where he advised the Tribal Council and various tribal boards, committees, and staff on a variety of issues, including economic development activities, the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act ("IGRA"), and Constitution and Corporate Charter amendments. He also worked for the Seneca Nation of Indians, including as an Assistant Attorney General & then as Attorney General, serving as the primary legal adviser to the Nation's President and Council, and General Enterprises and Gaming Enterprises. He also represented the Nation before Nation Courts and Federal & State courts. His work in private practice focuses on the representation of Indian tribal governments and other Native American clients. Mr. Jordan regularly represents tribal clients before executive agencies of the Federal government, Congress and the courts. Mr. Jordan regularly represents tribal clients before the National Indian Gaming Commission on ordinance approvals, management and development contract issues, and Indian land determinations. He also advises tribes about class III gaming compact issues, questions regarding tribal jurisdiction over Indian country, land claims, historic and cultural preservation, and in many other areas. Past professional posts: Partner, Stetson & Jordan, P.C., Washington, DC; Of Counsel, Fredericks Peebles and Morgan, LLP, 2008-present; In-house tribal attorney for the Saginaw Chippewa Tribe; attorney general for the Seneca Nation of Indians; 1997-2000, Associate Solicitor for Indian Affairs, U.S. Dept. of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs drafting legislation and testifying before congressional committees. Mr. Jordan worked on tribal gaming matters under IGRA, including class III gaming compact approvals, off-reservation trust land acquisitions for gaming purposes and "Indian land" determinations under Section 20 of IGRA. Mr. Jordan also consulted with the Department of Justice on litigation strategy in Indian law cases pending in the federal courts, including the United States Supreme Court, and provided advocacy for Department of Interior and tribal interests with other Executive branch agencies (Agriculture, HUD, Commerce, and others).

JORDAN, KURT
(associate professor)

Affiliation & Address: Dept. of Anthropology and American Indian and Indigenous Studies Program - Cornell University, 210 McGraw Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853 (607) 255-3109. E-Mail: kj21@cornell.edu. Interests: Iroquois archaeology and history; 18th century Iroquois communities, political economy, colonialism and cultural entanglement. Dr. Jordan's research centers on the archaeology of Haudenosaunee (Iroquois) peoples, emphasizing the settlement patterns, housing, and political economy of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century Senecas. The empirical evidence provided by archaeology can do much to combat inaccurate narratives of Indian decline and powerlessness that pervade scholarly and popular writing about Native Americans. For example, fieldwork at the 1715-1754 Seneca Townley-Read site near Geneva, New York, recovered data indicating substantial Seneca autonomy, selectivity, innovation, and opportunism in an era usually considered to be one of cultural disintegration. Dr. Jordan's current project centers on the circa 1688-1715 Seneca White Springs site, also near present-day Geneva, New York. This site was founded in the aftermath of the 1687 French-led Denonville invasion of Seneca territory that resulted in the burning of all the major Seneca settlements in the homeland, including Ganondagan (now Ganondagan State Historic Site). Archaeological data from White Springs provide direct evidence of Seneca resilience in the face of the Denonville tragedy, and how the community rebuilt and endured a difficult time period. The selection of the site and the research plan were designed in consultation with representatives of the Seneca Nation. Cornell's American Indian and Indigenous Studies Program has provided full-tuition scholarships for Native students to attend summer excavations at White Springs since 2007 with goal of building archaeological capacity among Native communities. To date, nine undergraduate and nine post-graduate students have received support. The collaborative nature of the project will extend beyond fieldwork to analysis and writing. The results from White Springs will be published as a multi-author, multivocal book that will include the perspectives of indigenous academics, Seneca community authorities, & archaeological specialists. The artifact assemblage excavated at White Springs will be donated to the Seneca Iroquois National Museum in Salamanca, New York, for permanent curation. Professor Jordan also maintains an interest in the long-term scope of indigenous occupation in what is now Central New York. He has delivered public talks on the archaeology of the region to audiences in Bath, Canandaigua, Geneva, Ithaca, Liverpool, Lodi, McLean, Montour Falls, Tyrone, Trumansburg, and Waverly.

JUNEAU, DENISE (Hidatsa-Mandan/Blackfeet)
(superintendent of Seattle, WA Public Schools)

Born April 5th in Oakland, Calif. Education: Montana State University, BA; Harvard Graduate School of Education, EdM; University of Montana School of Law, JD, 2004; Honorary Doctorate, Humane Letters, Carroll College, 2010. Affiliation & Address: Superintendent (2018-present), Seattle Public Schools, 2445 3rd Ave. S, Seattle, WA 98134 (206) 252-0000. Other professional post: Principal and Founder, Blue Cloud Consulting, Missoula, MT, 2018-present. Upon her arrival as superintendent, Denise launched a comprehensive entry plan and a listening and learning tour. Her goal was to build a longer table at Seattle Public Schools – inviting new voices and perspectives to the conversation and intentionally engaging with families and students the district has underserved. From this feedback, a strategic plan was developed and will guide the district forward for the next five years. The plan is bold and focuses on supporting students and families furthest from educational justice, beginning with African American males. She also established the district's first Student Advisory Board. Formed of student representatives from each high school, the Student Advisory Board provides student voice, advice, and unique perspectives to Superintendent Juneau throughout the school year. Denise's story takes her from Head Start to Harvard. After graduating from Browning High School, located on the Blackfeet Indian reservation, Denise received her bachelor's degree in English from Montana State University. She continued her education and earned a master's in education from the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Learning how closely tied public education and social justice were, and after teaching and working at the state education agency, Denise set her sights on a legal education and received her juris doctorate from the University of Montana School of Law. Superintendent Juneau is an enrolled member of the Mandan Hidatsa Tribes, a descendant of the Blackfeet Tribe, and the Tlingit and Haida Tribes. In 2008, she became the first American Indian woman in the country ever elected to an executive statewide office, where she became the superintendent of public instruction. In 2012, she was reelected to a second term. As Montana's superintendent of public instruction, Denise developed a statewide initiative, Graduation Matters Montana, which brought schools, business leaders, community members, students and families together to work toward a common goal – that every student graduate from high school ready to succeed. In just a few years, the state's graduation rate increased to its highest level ever recorded. She is happy to bring to Seattle, her value of student-centered decision making and her belief that great things can happen in public education when they are steeped in community. Throughout her career in public education, Supt. Juneau has championed equitable access to quality education. She is deeply committed to ensuring each Seattle Public Schools student graduates ready for college, career, and community. Superintendent Juneau actively leverages the strengths of the district to implement effective strategies that foster student achievement. Her experience spans the spectrum of education from classroom teacher to superintendent of public instruction for the State of Montana. She is an enrolled member of the Mandan Hidatsa Tribes, and a descendant of the Blackfeet Tribe, and the Tlingit and Haida Tribes. Past professional posts: Director of Indian Education (2006-09), Montana State Supt. (2009-17); Indian education specialist, Office of Public Instruction, Helena, MT. Awards, honors: Women Inspiring Change: International Women's Day; Mi-Ha-Ka-Ta-Tis Award; Benedict Surwill Lifetime Achievement Award; Leo Reano Memorial Award, Human and Civil Rights Award; Alumni Council Award for Outstanding Contributions to Education; Patricia Whitefoot Education Award; Distinguished Alumni Award; Alumni Achievement Award; Jacqueline Lougheed World Understanding Lecturer; Delta Kappa Gamma Honor - International Society for Key Women in Education; Indian Educator of the Year; Candidate for U.S. House of Representatives, 2015-16. Memberships: National Indian Education Assn; Montana Indian Education Assn; Montana Association of Teachers of English and Language Arts; American Education Research Assn.

KAMPER, DAVID*(associate professor of American Indian Studies)

Education: UCLA, MS (American Indian Studies), 1998, PhD (Anthropology), 2003. Affiliation & Address: Associate Professor & Chairperson, Department of American Indian Studies, AL325, San Diego State University, San Diego, CA 92182 (619) 594-8081. E-mail: dkamper@mail.sdsu.edu. His research interests are American Indian political economy; economic development; tribal sovereignty; race, gender, and culture in sports; labor studies; and American cultural studies. His first book, The Work of Sovereignty: Labor Activism and Self-Determination at the Navajo Nation offers an historical and ethnographic account of tribal labor relations. It explores how employees of the Navajo Area Indian Health Service use grassroots and labor activism to secure a voice in Navajo Nation politics. His research looks at how tribal self-determination is envisioned and enacted at the grassroots level as well as the tribal nation-state level. Currently he is working on a manuscript entitled Sporting Native Wellness: How American Indians Build Communities of Healing through Basketball, Skateboarding, and Golf which considers three very popular recreational activities (basketball, golf, skateboarding) in Indian Country and how participation in these sports promotes individual and communal health and wellness combating inter-generational trauma derived from settler colonialism. In Sporting Native Wellness he chronicles Indian communities' use of basketball, golf, and skateboarding for implicit and explicit goals of mending society. These stories of Native participation in sport illustrate how indigenous people revive tradition and revitalize culture by engaging popular American culture for their own purposes of creating new indigenous practices of meaning. He also has interest in issues of the ways in which mainstream culture represents Indigenous peoples and the effects of these dominant representations. He has edited a book on American Indian casino gaming entitled Indian Gaming: Who Wins?. Past professional post: Assistant Professor of Anthropology, Northeastern Illinois University. Published works: Indian Gaming: Who Wins?, with Angela Muliis (American Indian Studies Center, UCLA, 2000); American Indian Sovereignty & Law: An Annotated Bibliography (American Indian Studies Center, UCLA, 2000); The Work of Sovereignty: Tribal Labor Relations and Self-Determination at the Navajo Nation (School for Advanced Research Press, Santa Fe, NM, 2010).
