

Sarina Addy is an LL.M. student at the University of California, Berkeley. She recently graduated from Humboldt University of Berlin's Law School and passed the German First State Exam. During her German law studies, she specialized in International and English Law at King's College London and gained insights into the Kenyan legal system through a semester at the Kenyatta University School of Law in Nairobi. Since 2019, Sarina has been a scholar of the German Academic Scholarship Foundation. At the Humboldt University of Berlin, she was a member of the Humboldt Law Clinic for Fundamental and Human Rights. Beyond her academic pursuits, Sarina co-founded "Studyway," an award-winning social initiative dedicated to advancing equal opportunities in education. In her free time, she enjoys music and is passionate about playing tennis and football (soccer). As a Miller Fellow, Sarina is supporting Professor David Oppenheimer in his research on Comparative Equality and Anti-Discrimination Law.
